HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, Tuesday Evening—8 P. M.

I am just in from the front, and send by a messenger to Frederick a brief dispatch of the occurrences of yesterday and to-day. The rebel force which made the raid on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad consisted of STUART'S whole force, with eight pieces of artillery. On Monday night they arrived at Westminster and interrupted the Western Maryland Railroad. They threw out strong pickets, and shot two citizens who attempted to escape and give us information. Early this morning, Gen. GREGG attacked STUART and drove him all the way from Westminster to Hanover, Pennsylvania—a distance of eighteen miles. During the forenoon Gens. KILPATRICK and CASTAR drove STUART out of HANOVER after a splendid fight, and they are still pursuing him; part of his force going toward Gettysburgh and part toward York.

During the day Gen. BUFORD drove a regiment of rebel infantry out of Gettysburgh, who also retired in a northeasterly direction.

You may expect to hear of brilliant news.

The whole army is in splendid spirits.

The rebels are reported to have burned Cashtown, Penn., yesterday. It is between Gettysburgh and Chambersburgh.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY POTOMAC, Wednesday, July 1, 1863—8 A. M.

Gen. KILPATRICK captured fifty prisoners, including a Lieutenant-Colonel and a Lieutenant yesterday afternoon. They belonged to FITZHUGH LEE'S cavalry brigade. The rebels retreated by way of the road to York, which is the nearest route to Harrisburgh. The column of infantry which was driven out of Gettysburgh, also fell back east toward York by way of Berlin and Abbottsville. This looks like a concentration of their forces near Harrisburgh.

LATER.

WEDNESDAY, 12 M.

From the best information we can obtain the rebels appear to be concentrating their forces on a line running from Cashtown to Berlin. LONGSTREET and A. P. HILL were near Cashtown yesterday. They are ripping, stripping and stealing everything. Citizens report that they burned twenty-five houses in Shippensburgh a couple days ago. In Gettysburgh they took everything that was left—most of the goods having been sent away in advance.

Our cavalry received a glorious welcome in Gettysburgh.

It looks at this hour as though the rebels were preparing to clear from the State with their plunder, or else to concentrate and give us battle.

York, Penn., was evacuated by the enemy last evening. L. L. CROUNSE.

DISPATCHES FROM WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, July 1.

Letters of to-day's date have been received from the Army of the Potomac, in which the following facts are stated:

Our last movements have been characterised by a marked willingness on the part of the soldiers to undergo any fatigue within the bounds of human endurance.

The rebels recently sent only a small scouting or reconnoitering party to the vicinity of Frederick. Sharing in the general belief that there is no force of the enemy between that city and Hagerstown, the stage proprietor this morning sent out his team from the former for the latter place. This fact is stated to show that the intervening distance is now believed to be safe to travelers.

A portion of our forces surrounded Emmettsburgh on Monday, and captured without conflict a battery—the only reble force there.

Notwithstanding various reports to the contrary, our pontoon bridges at Edwards' Ferry have been taken up and safely secured by the Engineer brigade.

Gen. STAHL was relieved from his cavalry command by Gen. HOOKER on Sunday, and Gen. KILPATRICK appointed in his place.

Brigadier-Gen. COPELAND has been assigned to other duty, and his late command has been reorganized.

The very best spirit pervades the army, and the hope of an early and decisive battle is the prevailing sentiment of the troops.

The portion of Maryland occupied by our army is teeming with rich agricultural products, affording large supplies. The most friendly disposition is evinced toward us by the inhabitants generally, and every precaution is taken to prevent the wanton destruction of property.

The following circular has been issued:

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, June 30, 1863.

The Commanding General requests that previous to the engagement soon to be expected with the enemy, corps and all other commanding officers address their troops, explaining to them the immense issues involved in the struggle. The enemy is now on our soil. The whole country looks anxiously to this army to deliver it from the presence of the foe. Our failure to do so will leave us no such welcome as the swelling of millions of hearts with pride and joy at our success would give to every soldier of the army. Homes, firesides and domestic altars are involved. The army has fought well heretofore. It is believed that it will fight more desperately and bravely than ever if it is addressed in fitting terms. Corps and other commanders are authorized to order the instant death of any soldier who fails to do his duty at this hour.

By command of Major-Gen. MEADE.
S. WILLIAMS, Assistant Adj.-Gen.

Our cavalry is actively scouting in every direction, and no fears of surprise are for an instant entertained by any one.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, July 1.

Official advices from the Army of the Potomac state that a portion of our cavalry under Gen. KILPATRICK had a handsome fight yesterday with the enemy's cavalry at Hanover. We captured a battle-flag, Lieutenant-Colonel, a Captain, and 45 privates. Fifteen or twenty of the enemy were killed.

MOVEMENTS OF THE ENEMY.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday July 1.

Parties arriving to-night assert that LEE is nearer Frederick than we supposed this morning, and that the relative positions of the two armies is more complicated than indicated in yesterday's dispatches.

LEE is believed to be striving to make headway in a south-east direction.

An extended reconnoissance made beyond the fortifications of Washington develops no signs of the enemy. All have left for more northern regions.

TELEGRAMS FROM HARRISBURGH.

HARRISBURGH, Penn., Wednesday, July 1.

Everything is quiet.

There is no news from any quarter this morning.

Gov. CURTIN leaves at 1 o'clock for Philadelphia. He will stop at the Continental Hotel, and return here at 10 o'clock.

Gov. CURTIN desires to see the citizens, that they may know and appreciate the danger which they have been so loth to believe, that they may not relax their efforts until the danger is over.

HARRISBURGH, Wednesday, July 1—9:30 P. M.

A battle took place yesterday afternoon at Hanover Junction, between PLEASANTON and the rebel cavalry. It lasted nearly the whole afternoon. The result was that the enemy lost 400 killed, wounded and prisoners, besides six pieces of artillery. Our loss is reported at 200.

It is believed that the main body of LEE'S army is between Gettysburgh and Chambersburgh.

The indications are, that a battle has been fought to-day between LEE and MEADE, but to what extent and with what result is unknown; nor is it likely to be known to-night.

Heavy firing has been heard here the whole evening in the direction of Carlisle. It is a long way off and at times very rapid. The river banks are lined with persons listening and discussing the probable results.

OUR FORCES AT HANOVER JUNCTION.

The Lancaster Express, of Tuesday evening, publishes the following important intelligence:

"We have just learned from a reliable source that Gen. MEADE has taken Hanover Junction, thus cutting into the rebel lines, and turning their right. Gen. EARLY has retreated from York, and EWELL from in front of Harrisburgh.

The position of our army is such now that LEE must either beat a hasty retreat at great disadvantage, or give battle to Gen. MEADE on his chosen ground. In either event it is of the utmost importance that the new levies be pushed on as rapidly as possible. Now is the hour in which to strike the decisive blow."

TELEGRAMS FROM WASHINGTON.

NO REBELS WITHIN TEN MILES.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, July 1.

It was ascertained by our scouts yesterday, who completed a circuit extending ten miles from the city, that there was not a single rebel soldier to be seen.

Our scouts are confident that there are no rebel soldiers anywhere between Frederick and the Potomac.

Washington to-day is remarkably quiet.

DISCIPLINE OF THE SEVENTH REGIMENT.

BALTIMORE, Wednesday, July 1.

The discipline which is exercised in the New-York Seventh regiment is marked by such discrimination and prompt punishment, that that organization fully maintains its character. The regimental bulletin board at Fort Federal Hill to-day contained the following notice:

[Extract from General Order.]

Private W. E. KIDDER, of Co. A, having violated his pledge to return on the expiration of his furlough, is hereby dishonorably dismissed from further duty, and will not be allowed to rejoin his Company during their present term of service.

OUR SPECIAL ARMY CORRESPONDENCE.

Our Scouts in Hagerstown—The Departure of Gen. Hooker—Rapid Marches of our Troops—Gen. Meade's Staff—Doings of the Rebel Cavalry—No Telegraphic Communication with Washington, &c.

ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, Monday, June 29, 1863.

A party of Col. SHARPE'S gallant scouts, only nine in number, headed by Sergt. M. W. KLINE, dashed into Hagerstown this morning, in the very rear of the enemy, and captured ten prisoners and a large rebel mail, which was on its way from the South to LEE'S army.

Gen. HOOKER, accompanied by Maj. LAWRENCE and Capt. RUSSELL, his two personal Aids, left Frederick at noon, to-day, having been delayed by supposed trouble on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. His departure was entirely private.

The day has been wet and the roads heavy, but the troops are performing great feats of marching. They press forward with great vigor. When the history of this march is written people will be startled by the feats of endurance which our troops daily sustain.

I am very happy to say that the retirement of Gen. HOOKER has involved no material delay in the movement of the army. Gen. MEADE steps in vigorously, and applies himself with great energy to the task before him.

The entire Staff, save Gen. HOOKER'S personal Aids, remains as heretofore for the present. Gen. MEADE adds three Aids, however, in the persons of Maj. BIDDLE and Capts. JAY and MEADE.

I should not be surprised if a great battle is fought on the Fourth of July, possibly sooner.

This is the important week of the war.

The Army of the Potomac will do its duty.

MIDDLEBURGH, CARROLL Co., Md. Tuesday, June 30.

The presumption here is that the public are having a nice little excitement over the doings of the rebel cavalry in the rear of Washington. As that point is not exactly in my department, I cannot give you the particulars about the rampaging rebels down in that vicinity. We heard last evening that the rebel cavalry moving toward Annapolis, had struck and destroyed the Washington Branch of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad at Laurel Factory, sixteen miles north of Washington. Where they went to from that point we have not fully learned, but an impression prevails that they steered for Ellicott's Mills on the main line, only ten miles distant by pike from Baltimore, and about fifteen by railroad.

Washington, we know, is not in telegraphic communication with us, and the only railroad in operation to-day is the Western Maryland Railroad, from Union Bridge to Baltimore. I sent a special messenger by that last evening, and he arrived in Baltimore safely.

The Frederick Road was not in operation. The regular morning train from Frederick, as also the special train with Gen. HOOKER, Gen. MARSTON, Col. HARDIE and others, were delayed at Monocacy Junction until after 12 o'clock, and I do not know that they left then. The telegraph line was not in operation and the road was being reconnoitered by a couple of engines, but with what success I did not learn.

The fact that Washington is absolutely cut off excites little sympathy in this army. If NERO could fiddle while Rome was burning, it is believed he finds his counterpart in the Commander-in-Chief, who cat-hauls the Army of the Potomac while the rebels are positively knocking at his own doors.

We have very little information from the enemy. The great distance between the two armies, and the rapid movement of both, have tended to lessen reports from the enemy. We shall, however, have definite information from the enemy in a day or two, and possibly a battle by the close of the week.

I am indebted to Capt. DAHLGREN, formerly of Gen. HOOKER'S Staff, but now volunteer aid to Gen. PLEASANTON, for late Richmond and Charleston papers, which I forward herewith.

The dash into Hagerstown, yesterday, by Sergeant CLINE and eight scouts, was a very daring thing. They took more prisoners than they had men in their own party.

The public may be laboring under excitement now, because of recent bold movements of the enemy; but by the close of the week, if signs and plans do not fail, there will be cause for far greater perturbation of the public pulse. We all hope it may beat freer with the tidings of victory.

LATER.

TUESDAY, June 30—10 A. M.

The Western Maryland Railroad is also stopped, and the Army of the Potomac is without either telegraphic or railroad communication with Washington, or any other point. Blissful moment.

Rumors of a fight at Westminster prevailed last evening, but they proved to have been induced by the advance of our cavalry, some of them being taken for rebels by the citizens.

A few Baltimore papers of Monday have reached us, giving accounts of the rapid advance of the enemy along the Southern border of Pennsylvania, and the interruption of the Northern Central Railroad at York and Wrightsville. These things excite lively comment among the troops, and sharpen their appetites for the coming contest. We earnestly hope they will not fail to cross the Susquehanna and move on Philadelphia.

I sent a TIMES messenger by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad from Frederick yesterday, but I am not at all sure that he got through. He had a full account of Gen. HOOKER'S removal, and the causes thereof. I send another to-day through the country on horseback, and hope he will not fail. Communications are decidedly precarious.

If it will assure the public at all, I can say that the Army of the Potomac is in good position, full of spirit, and nerving itself for the great work before it. A feeling, based upon what it can do, pervades the army—that the time has now come for a change of the score from defeat to victory.

Rebel Knowledge of Gen. Foster's Movements—Patriotism of the Nine Months' Men.

NEWBERN, N.C., Saturday, June 27, via FORTRESS MONROE, Tuesday, June 30.

The Wilmington Journal gives full accounts of our movements here, naming the regiments that were departing, and giving their destination before anything had been sent North about it for publication.

The Journal thinks that the remarkable celerity of Gen. FOSTER'S movements is a just cause for grave apprehension, and says he is the nimble antelope that will step into Richmond, while the Confederates are napping, unless he is well watched.

Though the time of the nine months' men in the Department of North Carolina had about expired, they cheerfully volunteered to serve during the present emergency, however long it might last.

NEWS FROM BERMUDA.

The Rebel Steamer Lady Davis and other Blockade Runners—Arrival of Vallandigham.

We have the Bermuda Royal Gazette of June 23.

The rebel steamer Lady Davis arrived at St. Georges on the 22d from Wilmington. She is reported to belong to the rebel Government and to have brought important dispatches from that Government to the British Government.

There were twelve blockade runners at Wilmington on the 16th. Two of them left in company with the Lady Davis, which passed close to the blockading squadron on her way out of Wilmington. The Lady Davis was formerly the Cornubia.

The steamer Harriet Pinckney had arrived from England and the Lord Clyde had cleared for Nassau.

The steamer Marion, from Nassau, bound to England, had called for coal, but not being able to get supplied she proceeded to Halifax.

A line of steamers is about to be established between Bermuda and Liverpool.

The Gazette says:

"MR. VALLANDIGHAM.—This gentleman, who has caused so much excitement in the Northern States, and who was banished to the Southern States for a stated period, arrived here in the Confederate steamer Lady Davis, from Wilmington, on Saturday last. It is reported that Mr. V. is on his way to Canada, and there to await coming events."

Arrived at Hamilton, Bermuda, June 18, schooner E. A. Willard, CORLY, Bangor.

THE REBELS FALLING BACK.

ESTIMATED FORCE OF BRAGG'S ARMY

PROSPECTS OF ACTION.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE CUMBERLAND, In Bivouac at "Big Spring Branch," on Murfreesboro and Manchester Pike, 8 miles south-east of Murfreesboro, Thursday, June 25, 1863.

I fear that no map which you either have access to or can publish will enable you to fix the point at which headquarters are now established, and which I have localized as best I can in the heading of this letter.

The army had barely got into motion yesterday morning when a warm, soaking harvest rain began to fall. We had hoped that it might clear up by the time we should start in the afternoon, but our hopes were vain. It poured and pelted all the afternoon and evening, and our ride from Murfreesboro to this point was amid rain and mud. The road on which we were moving was the route assigned to the centre column—Gen. THOMAS' corps—namely, the Murfreesboro and Manchester Turnpike; and we passed on our way the teams, and trains, and artillery, and the hearty fellows trudging along with their rubber-blankets wrapt round their shoulders and muskets. The General and Staff found shelter on the balcony of the solitary house at this point, and here we waited till well on toward midnight before the wagons came up, and with them our tents, our blankets and our supper.

Courier-lines were by-and-bye established; orderlies and messengers came in from the several commanders, and it became possible to take a general view of the result of the day's operations.

The column of the right, commanded by Gen. MCCOOK, moved down by the Murfreesboro and Shelbyville road, skirmishing commencing about six miles south of Murfreesboro, at the point where our outer vedettes have been posted. JOHNSTON'S division had the advance, and drove the rebels handsomely till well on in the afternoon, when we had pushed them back to "Liberty Gap," twelve miles south of Murfreesboro. Liberty Gap is an opening through one of these isolated sporadic knobs which form the western outposts of the great East Tennessee range. It is an excellent point for defence, and we had expected that the rebels would make a stand here and contest the pass. We were not disappointed. JOHNSTON found the force strongly posted, with artillery at commanding positions. He drove them, however, and with nightfall succeeded in holding the outer rim of the Gap.

HARDEE'S corps of BRAGG'S army seems to have had the advance, and covering the whole front of the rebel line, as we found his troops opposite our right, centre and left.

The force in the vicinity of Liberty Gap consisted of about 800 Arkansas troops, and at the time of our advance they were out harvesting.

JOHNSTON'S loss in the day's running fight was about 90 men in killed and wounded. We lost no prisoners. I have no information of the rebel loss; but we took about twenty prisoners, who were eager to be taken, and thinking that our advance was only a slight demonstration, were anxious to be taken to the rear lest they should be recaptured.

The flank of our extreme right was covered by MITCHEL'S division of cavalry, who moved out on Salem and Versailles, threatening Middleton.

Our centre, composed of THOMAS' corps, moved out by the same road which I have indicated as our line of advance. He found no enemy up to the point where headquarters are now established. Eight miles in advance of this point we met another of those spurs of highland, the opening through which is called "Hoover's Gap." Some distance this side of that point, REYNOLDS' division, which had the advance, encountered the enemy, who were prepared to contest this pass also. By night he had succeeded in pushing the enemy back and into the Gap, which is three miles long. He had penetrated it for about a mile, holding the first ridge and commanding the road which crosses the middle of the Gap.

You will observe that the knob through which Hoover's Gap passes is about four miles east of that through which Liberty Gap passes. The interval is covered by a kind of natural curtain. There is, therefore, no danger of the enemy penetrating between our right and centre.

In this contest we had a slight loss, and we succeeded in taking about thirty prisoners. CRITTENDEN moved still further to our left, and last night established his headquarters at Bradyville.

Such was the situation last night. Operations were resumed early this morning along the whole line, but we have as yet no reports of operations.

It continued to rain all last night, and this forenoon up to the present hour of writing, (11 A. M.,) the rain still continues.

I regret not to be able to enter into the strategic relations of this march of manœuvre, but the mail agent waits while I write.

HEADQUARTERS, ARMY OF THE CUMBERLAND, Big SPRING CREEK, Friday, June 26, 1863.

I.

GENERAL VIEW OF THE SITUATION.

The third day of the advance of the Army of the Cumberland finds us at about midway of the interval between the positions lately held by the two forces, whose headquarters have been respectively at Murfreesboro and Shelbyville. Our front sweeps across a stretch of fifteen miles from Liberty Gap, where our right rests, to Lumley's Station, and where our left rests. Beyond these, on either side, our cavalry sweep a swarth on flank and front.

Although the main front of the enemy has been along the line of the Duck River, they have yet held a secondary front up to within half a dozen miles of our position at Murfreesboro, the interval being held by forces of observation and occupation. These outposts of the enemy—the surf of the tide-wave—have been pushed steadily backward, as we have pushed steadily forward, till at length they have found points d'appui on the lateral group of mountain ridges (the outer sentinels of the great Cumberland range) through which the gorges, styled respectively Guy's Gap, Liberty Gap and Hoover's Gap, run. Backed on these strongholds they have turned at bay, and have for two days been able to prevent this army from debouching into the country southward.

It is barely possible that Gen. ROSECRANS was partly consenting to their occupation of these points. At least no very vigorous effort has been made to drive them out. The problem before this army at the outset of the campaign was not simply that of a march as rapid as possible on the shortest line between two given points, say Murfreesboro and Shelbyville. It was a much more difficult, more complicated, more hazardous task. Marches of manœuvre have this differentiating them from mere marches of concentration, that they have strategic bearings, and wield a great, often even a decisive, control over the issue before battle, or even without battle at all. It is necessary to manœuvre so as to deceive the enemy as to our real intentions—to make feints and demonstrations in various directions—while our real point of concentration is, in fact, another. It will be plain to any one who will examine the map of this region, with an eye even slightly instructed in the military relations of topography—who will look at the position and line of retreat of the rebels—that our only hope of bringing on a decisive engagement was to manœuvre so as to flank the rebel right by a turning movement on Tullahoma.

The army has now reached that point, where it is within easy communicating distance, and whence it can depart to execute the ultimate design of the commanding General. The passage of the Gaps, whether they shall be carried by assault, or be turned by making detours, is, therefore, only a secondary question The main issue being settled, the other will be of comparatively easy execution; and the advance is down on the programme for to-day.

Viewed in its whole scope, the movement of the army has, thus far certainly, been attended with remarkable success. There is good evidence to show that the advance—if not the mere fact of the advance, which of course the rebels are constantly expecting, yet its direction and development thus far—has taken the enemy by surprise, and it is evident that BRAGG does not yet penetrate the real nature of the movement. He appears to be massing on our right, with a view of covering Shelbyville, while we are massing on his right, with the design of seizing Tullahoma and the Chattanooga Railroad. The plan of Gen. ROSECRANS is no less bold than to plant his army on the rear of BRAGG'S, compelling him to change front and fight a battle with his back to the Duck, and we between him and his line of retreat.

In manœuvres of this kind, however, everything depends on rapidity of movement, for all offensive operations must perforce be either on the front or one of the flanks. Of course, if any considerable time is allowed, the adversary has time to recover his surprise, test by reconnoissances which is feint and which is reality, and make his dispositions accordingly. When an advance is once fairly begun, a point is presently reached where the commander must clearly settle his ultimate object and the means by which he proposes to accomplish it; and when once determined, he cannot move too rapidly on its execution. I have seen more than one campaign fail by a want of decision and vigor at this critical point.

In our own case this delay, which has lasted now for two days, has been unavoidable, first because it was necessary that the right and left wings, after making their detours and unmasking the gaps, should concentrate on the centre for the purpose of making the final march in mass; and then because these operations have been retarded by the rain which has been falling almost continuously ever since we started out. The three main roads on which the three great columns are moving southward are excellent pikes, and are little injured by the rain; but the country roads connecting these, and by which the wings have to move on the centre are greatly cut up and all movement is exceedingly slow and toilesome. To-day will, we hope, however, see the columns through the gaps, and massed for the final march.

The statements of the rebel prisoners with respect to the positions of their forces are necessarily conflicting at a time when there is movement over the entire theatre of operations. But, with respect to the total strength of BRAGG'S army, the statements we get are encouraging if they can be relied on. An intelligent Arkansas Lieutenant puts their entire force before us at thirty-five thousand in all arms. He acknowledges the transfer of portions of the army to Mississippi, but says the deduction has been partly made up from reinforcements elsewhere. Gens. CLAYTON and CHURCHILL, he says, with five thousand men, joined BRAGG from Mobile a fortnight ago. Gen. POLK, with his command, has been engaged at Tullahoma, erecting fortifications which, if completed, would be of great strength. We will be likely to disturb the benevolent designs of the Right Reverend General.

If we shall be successful in the turning movement on the rebel right wing, the intelligence we receive from Gen. BURNSIDE of the operations of CARTER'S cavalry force on the railroad of East Tennessee—and which you also have doubtless received and published—is of immense importance. It appears that Col. SAUNDERS destroyed the Richmond and Chattanooga Railroad all the way from Lenoir to Knoxville, tearing up the rails and destroying three bridges. The first of these, Stalesbridge, is 312 feet long; the second, Strawberry Plains Bridge, 160 feet long; the third, Mossy Creek Bridge, is 325 feet long. If the destruction has been as complete as official authority represents, it will be impossible for the rebels to use this great artery of communication between their forces in the centre zone and those in the left zone. Of course it cuts off BRAGG from all hope of reinforcements from Virginia. If then we shall be able to bring the rebel force to battle, it will certainly make the chances of decisive action much brighter than they have yet been.

We can now enter into some details of movements on the right, centre and left.

II.

OPERATIONS ON THE RIGHT WING.

In my yesterday's letter I mentioned the general scope of MITCHELL'S operations, who, with his division of cavalry, has been operating on the extreme right of our right wing. As his operations have been on a field removed from us here by fifteen or twenty miles, it was, of course, impossible for me to give any details. But reports which come in from the chief of cavalry, show that his work of Wednesday and Thursday was spirited and successful in the highest degree. He left Triune at 8 A. M. of Wednesday—struck the rebel pickets half a mile south of Eagleville, and continued heavy skirmishing, driving them to Rover, where he met the enemy in force. Here he formed a line of battle, pushing the enemy a quarter of a mile beyond the town. At this point the rebels opened with a battery of six guns, supported by a regiment and a battalion of infantry. Pushing on, however, he drove them to their rifle-pits within half a mile of Unionville. Twenty-seven horses were found killed, and the same number of men dead and wounded. At this point Gen. MITCHELL received orders from the Chief of cavalry to attack Middleton. This he immediately proceeded to do, driving the enemy with loss of sixty horses. The rebels now took refuge in the houses, from which they fired on our approaching cavalry. A vigorous shelling, however, soon compelled them to evacuate a town which was presently in flames. Having achieved this handsome bit of work, he fell back, with his command to Gen. STANLEY'S camp. Our entire loss in the expedition was twenty killed and wounded.

In the programme of operations on the right, it was arranged that Gen. GRANGER, with his force of reserves, should make vigorous demonstrations on the right of our right wing, for the purpose of engaging the enemy's attention in that direction. On Wednesday he had moved down as far as Fosterville, and yesterday he sent down Col. PATRICK, with his cavalry command, as far as Guy Gap, on a reconnoissance. He found the enemy at the Gap, with a battery of artillery and three or four regiments of infantry. It is a strong position, and can be turned only by a long detour.

The operations of Gen. MCCOOK'S column were confined yesterday to pushing the enemy through Liberty Gap. Early in the day the rebels came up through the gap evidently for the purpose of feeling our line. Having become somewhat troublesome, Gen. JOHNSTON, with his division, had permission to make the attack. This he did in good style, pushing the rebels clear through the gap, the whole length and both openings of which we now hold. Our loss in this encounter is fifty killed and wounded; and among the mortally wounded is Col. MILLER, a valuable brigade commander.

III.

OPERATIONS OF THE CENTRE COLUMN.

Yesterday afternoon I accompanied Gen. GARFIELD, the Chief of Staff, to the extreme advance of our column on this road, ten miles south of headquarters. We found Gen. THOMAS' corps holding Hoover's Gap, almost up to its end, which was still occupied by the rebels.

The gap is three miles in length—the opening being from two hundred yards to half a mile in width. Near the southern end of the gap it is crossed laterally by a small stream named Garrison Fork, which bisects the ridge, thus forming two knobs on the southern extremity of the ridge. When the advance of Gen. THOMAS pushed the rebels through the gap, they took up position here, and they have been able to retain it up to the present time. They thus prevent our troops from debouching, and have been able to arrest the advance of the centre column for two days.

The driving of the enemy through Hoover's Gap—performed by WILDER'S brigade of mounted infantry, which had the advance of THOMAS' command—is the most spirited and successful bit of work that has been done since the present campaign began. The whole length of the pass is marked by positions admirably fitted for a vigorous defence, and it was further strengthened by rifle-pits and works. About halfway through, the rebels had a couple of well-made lunettes, flanking the road on each side. WILDER, however, got the rebels handsomely on the run, and he chased them vigorously almost to the end of the gap where Garrison Fork crosses. At this point a road strikes off to Fairfield. This portion of the enemy's front was held by STUART'S division—composed of the brigades of BATES, BEACH and JOHNSTON—the force being posted at Fairfield, on the Fairfield road up to the gap and the gap itself.

The advance of the centre corps seems to have taken the rebels quite as much by surprise as that of the flanks. When we came up the rebel force was having a gala time, and that portion which was on the Fairfield road, near the gap, was holding a review. The apparition of WILDER brought them promptly to think of more serious business. The long roll was forthwith sounded, and the rebels hastily massed to meet our advance. On coming into action, the mounted infantry, as you know, are wont to dismount, the horses of each set of four being held by the fourth man, while the others form to engage the enemy. The rebels greatly outnumbered WILDER'S force, for he had pushed on half a dozen miles beyond the head of the column; but he boldly engaged them. While thus employed the rebels sent a column round on his right, with a view to make a turning movement on that flank. They were able to come round under cover of a ridge, but WILDER had detected the movement, and detached one of his regiments to check it. Both forces, in fact, were ascending opposite slopes of the hill at the same time, and had come to very close quarters before encountering each other. The rebels had all the advantage of position and of powerful supports to fall back upon; but our men had the advantage in arms. The mounted infantry are armed with the Spencer rifle, a breech loader, which enables them to fire with great rapidity. For example, after the first mutual volley, our men were able to fire twice while the rebels were loading—an operation very demoralizing to the rebel mind. They got a severe punishing. In the meantime the enemy had sent another force to attempt a flank movement, by making a greater detour. WILDER, finding himself thus endangered, fell back on the infantry—the head of the column having by this time reached the entrance of the gap. REYNOLDS' division, of THOMAS' corps, having come to his assistance, the rebels were again chased back.

The loss to the enemy in this gallant little brush was quite heavy. We found twenty-three of their dead on the field. Others they had carried off. Their wounded numbered between two and three hundred, and we took fifty prisoners. In addition, we got a train of nine wagons, which we burnt. Our own loss was ten killed and about twenty wounded.

Little was done by the centre corps than hold the position in Hoover's Gap gained on Wednesday, as above described. The rebels continued, and up to the hour of writing continue, to hold the southern extremity of the Gap. Brisk firing was kept up during the day on the skirmish line, and our advance batteries were engaged with the rebel artillery. The enemy has on this position twelve guns, two of which, however, we succeeded in dismounting, and, by "pegging away at them," have compelled the enemy to shift them from point to point.

It would probably not have been a very difficult task to have by a vigorous assault in force, compelled the rebels to abandon this position. The plans of the commanding General have, however, limited Gen. THOMAS to holding the gap until the movements of MCCOOK and CRITTENDEN become more developed.

And it was in fact to counsel with Gen. THOMAS (in whose sound, sagacious judgment Gen. ROSECRANS places much confidence,) touching a proposed strategic manœuvre of the three corps, that the Chief of Staff rode out to the front.

Orders were sent out early this (Friday) morning to Gen. THOMAS to carry the head of the gap, and although we have as yet no reports from him, Gen. ROSECRANS is of the opinion that he has taken it. If so the rebels must have abandoned the position during the night, as we have heard no firing at the front (distant ten miles) this morning. The next position which the rebels will take up on the Manchester Pike, will probably be at "Matt's Hollow," about four miles beyond Hoover's Gap. This is a very narrow defile—so narrow in fact as to be a mere cañon. The rebels have rifle-pits and earthworks at its head, and will be able to make it a strong tête-de-pont. The probability is that Col. WILDER will make a detour, coming in on the southern opening of the defile, and if the rebels remain in it they will be apt to find themselves "corraled."

IV.

OPERATIONS OF THE LEFT WING.

With the exception of slight outpost skirmishing, Gen. CRITTENDEN'S command has met with no resistance on its march. The bad condition of the roads has, however, retarded his progress so much that he is full a day's march behind where he should have been. His headquarters are at Lumley's Station, but portions of his troops are still back of Bradyville.

While I write the tents at headquarters here are being struck, and we move to Beach Grove, ten miles south.

AFFAIRS IN ENGLAND.

The News—Gen. Grant a Hero—The Civil War in the North—Northern Traitors—The North to be Invaded—No Quarter—France in Texas—More Alabamas—London Gayeties.

LONDON, Saturday, June 13, 1863.

The news of the taking of Vicksburgh has not been confirmed. The steamer that arrived last night, with news to the 3d inst., leaves us still in suspense, but with the probability pretty strong that we shall hear of the surrender of both Vicksburgh and Port Hudson by the next arrival. A place besieged is a place taken, unless the siege can be raised by a stronger force of the enemy.

The operations of Gen. GRANT on the Lower Mississippi have extorted the unwilling admiration of the English Press. They admit that he has shown extraordinary ability, enterprise and activity. They hope that JOHNSTON may be able to gather a sufficient force to defeat him, but it is an even bet in London, to-day, that Vicksburgh has fallen. Confederate stock rules lower, and the Manchester cotton dealers are not so sanguine as they were a fortnight ago.

The exilement of VALLANDIGHAM, whatever may be thought of it as a matter of policy, cannot be considered an act of injustice. He has done more injury to the Union cause at home and abroad than a whole division of the rebel army. Why should he, or any man, be permitted to fight against the Government on Northern ground? The suppression of a newspaper in Chicago is chronicled as something extraordinary. Why, the war began two years ago with the suppression or enforced change of tone of scores of newspapers. After two years, is there less a need of unity in the North? Talk of terrorism! What is war but a great terror? It must be a terror to all the enemies of the Government—the actual ruling power—wherever that may be.

There is another reason why the laws of war—I do not mean in the technical sense, but in a higher and more real one—should be enforced wherever the Government has power to enforce them. It is that I foresee that the successes of the National troops on the Mississippi will necessitate an attempt, on the part of the South, to carry the war into Pennsylvania, and perhaps into Ohio. There have been stranger things than that rebel cannon should be seen and heard on the heights of West Hoboken. If I am not mistaken, it was the preparation for such a movement that left Gen. PEMBERTON so weak in Mississippi, and that made it so difficult for Gen. JOHNSTON to gather forces for his aid. DAVIS and LEE have been prudent—far too prudent to satisfy the Southern people up to this time. It is time for them to risk something. I am confident that before a month is past there will be a great effort made to carry the war into the Free States. It is to grow more fierce; fuller of revenge. I think the Southerners will carry out their threats respecting the officers of colored regiments, and other worse threats.

The news of the capture of Puebla, and the surrender of ORTEGA'S army, stated at 18,000, came to Paris just in time for the Emperor, who had been defeated in the Paris elections. But now comes the question—what next? Will it be Poland? Will it be America? Poland seems hopeless. If France moves in the matter, beyond diplomatic action, there is a jealousy that she will act for her own aggrandisement. She will move forward her frontier to the Rhine, but stop far short of securing the independence of Poland.

There is a curious item of news, to-day, about Texas, viz.: That old SAM HOUSTON is advocating the separate independence of that State under a French Protectorate. If this news is true, it confirms some former rumors of French intrigue in that quarter. Would it be strange if France, having conquered Mexico, should wish to re-attach to that Republic one of its ancient provinces? Probably the Emperor could not find a vainer, weaker, more ambitious tool for the purpose than SAM HOUSTON. Texas is just the cotton field France needs. Cut off from the Southern Confederacy, by the opening of the Mississippi, it might fall under French protection, unless a force were sent to occupy it on the part of the National Government.

Mr. ROEBUCK is not in a hurry about his motion for recognition. Mr. MASON has returned from Paris, but I am not informed of the result of his visit. It is not improbable that Texas may be the price demanded for French recognition. I have reason to know that the Emperor is very well posted respecting that country. When in Galveston, a few years ago, I met a distinguished Frenchman, well known to the Emperor, and who was well qualified to give him every information. The French Consul at Galveston was also a very accomplished man, and was about to return to France. There are many French settlers in Texas, who would not object to a political union with the Empire, which to Frenchmen everywhere is the centre of civilization and happiness.

The steamer Japan, with its name changed to Virginia, has been heard from, capturing American vessels off the Cape de Verde Islands. If I am not much mistaken it will not be long before you hear of the splendid and fast steamer that left here about two weeks ago, as everybody believes, on the same mission. The indefatigable Capt. BUTCHER has just got another small steamer ready in the Clyde. She made her trial trip a few days ago, and an account of her was sent to Mr. ADAMS. He communicated his suspicions to the Government, and a Commissioner was sent to examine her. The Commissioner found a jewel of a steamer, but not a sign of her being a war-steamer, so there is nothing to hinder her going off any day, taking on board her armament, and following in the track of the Alabama and Florida. And, as there is no way to hinder it, this predatory fleet will increase until every sea will be infested with these freebooters, strong enough to burn helpless merchantmen, and fast enough to escape from men-of-war sent to capture them.

London has fairly gone out of mourning. The Queen has appeared several times in public, to the great joy of her loyal subjects. Whole columns of the papers are filled with accounts of the receptions and balls of the nobility. ALMACKS has been revived. The beautiful Princess of Wales has danced with the Lord Mayor of London. The Prince has been made a merchant tailor as well as a fishmonger. At the balls of the aristocracy the company begins to arrive at 11 o'clock P. M., and continues to arrive till 1 A. M. London is so full, and the number that must be invited is so large, that the mansions of the nobility cannot hold their guests, who get as far as the doors and then drive away again.

Mr. DICKENS gave his last reading for the season last night, to such a crowd that ladies had to be taken from the room, and hundreds could not get admittance. Mr. and Mrs. BOURCICAULT have retired from the stage, temporarily, I presume, pending the new trial of the Jordan scandal. Mrs. JORDAN is wanted as a witness. The papers announce the arrival of Rev. HENRY WARD BEECHER, who, it is expected, will render important aid to the National cause. That aid, however, must be limited by the fact that no dissenter is likely to reach the higher classes in England. Then those who sympathize with the North care only for one question—Abolition. They would go for the South just as strongly if the South would free the negroes. But it matters little, if you open the Mississippi, beat Gen. LEE, and take Richmond. Northern victories will do more than the eulogium of a thousand Beechers. MONADNOCK.

AMERICAN TOPICS.

M. D. CONWAY vs. J. M. MASON.

The following correspondence has been referred to briefly. It appeared originally in the Times, to which Mr. MASON sent it for publication:

AUBERY-HOUSE, NOTTING-HILL, LONDON, W., June 10, 1863.

SIR: I have authority to make the following proposition on behalf of the leading Anti-Slavery men of America, who have sent me to this country:

If the States calling themselves 'The Confederate States of America' will consent to emancipate the negro slaves in those States, such emancipation to be guaranteed by a liberal European commission, the emancipation to be inaugurated at once, and such time to be allowed for its completion as the commission shall adjudge to be necessary and just, and such emancipation once made to be irrevocable, then the Abolitionists and Anti-Slavery leaders of the Northern States shall immediately oppose the prosecution of the war on the part of the United States Government, and, since they hold the balance of power, will certainly cause the war to cease by the immediate withdrawal of every kind of support from it.

I know that the ultimate decision upon so grave a proposition may require some time; but meanwhile I beg to be informed at your early convenience whether you will personally lend your influence in favor of a restoration of peace and the independence of the South upon the simple basis of the emancipation of the slaves.

Any guarantee of my own responsibility and my right to make this offer shall be forthcoming.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.,
MONCURE D. CONWAY.

J. M. MASON, Esq.

No. 24 UPPER SEYMOUR-STREET, PORTMAN-SQUARE, June 11, 1863.

SIR: I have your note of yesterday. The proposition it contains is certainly worthy of the gravest consideration, provided it is made under a proper responsibility. Yet, you must be aware that, while you know fully the representative position I occupy, I have not the like assurance as regards yourself.

If you think proper, therefore, to communicate to me who those are on whose behalf and authority you make the proposition referred to, with the evidence of your "right to make this offer," I will at once give you my reply, the character of which, however, must depend on what I may learn of your authority in the premises. I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

MONCURE D. CONWAY, Esq. J. M. MASON.

AUBERY HOUSE, NOTTING-HILL, W., June 16, 1863.

SIR: Your note of the 11th has been received.

I could easily give you the evidence that I represent the views of the leading Abolitionists of America, but with regard to the special offer which I have made, I have concluded that it was best to write out to America, and obtain the evidence of my right to make it in a form which will preclude any doubt as to its sufficiency.

I shall then address you again on the subject.

I am, &c., MONCURE D. CONWAY.

J. M. MASON, Esq.

No. 24 UPPER SEYMOUR-STREET, PORTMAN-SQUARE, June 17, 1863.

SIR: I have received your note of yesterday.

You need not write to America to "obtain the evidence" of your right to treat on the matter it imports. Our correspondence closes with this reply. It was your pleasure to commence it; it is mine to terminate it.

I desired to know who they were who were responsible for your mission to England, as you present it; and who were to confirm the treaty you proposed to make for arresting the war in America, on the basis of a separation of the States, with or without the sanction of their Government. But such information is of the less value now, as I find from an advertisment in the journals of the day, that you have brought to England letters of sufficient credit from those who sent you to invite a public meeting in London, under the sanction of a member of Parliament, who was to preside, to hear an address from you on the subject of your mission, with the promise of a like address from him.

This correspondence shall go to the public, and will find its way to the country, a class of the citizens of which you claim to represent. It will, perhaps, interest the Government and the soi-disant 'loyal men' there to know, under the sanction of your name, that the 'leading Anti-Savery men in America' are prepared to negotiate with the authorities of the Confederate States for a restoration of peace and the independence of the South, on a pledge that the Abolitionists and Anti-Slavery leaders of the North States shall immediately oppose the further prosecution of the war on the part of the United States Government, and since they hold the balance of power will certainly cause the war to cease by the immediate withdrawal of every kind of support from it.'

As some reward, however, for this interesting disclosure, your inquiry whether the Confederate States will consent to emancipation on the terms stated shall not go wholly unanswered. You may be assured, then, and perhaps it may be of value to your constituents to assure them, that the Northern States will never be in relation to put this question to the South, nor will the Southern States ever be in a position requiring them to give an answer.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,
J. M. MASON.

THE ANGLO-REBEL STEAMER, THE SOUTHERNER.

From the Liverpool Post, June 19.

The steamer Southerner, about which so much has been said and done at Hartlepool, has arrived in the Mersey. Externally, she fully bears out the rakish character that was given her there, being a low, sharp vessel, and one built apparently for speed. She has come round here to load for Nassau. The fact of her name in the first place, her owners (Messrs. FRASER, TRENHOLM & Co.,) in the second, and her Captain (BULLOCK,) an old Confederate, in the third, is quite sufficient to transfer the vigilance with which she was watched in the Tees to the Mersey.

THE CASE OF THE ALEXANDRA.

From the Liverpool Journal of Commerce, June 17.

It was stated yesterday—in a quarter likely to be well informed of the facts—that the trial in this case will commence in the Court of Exchequer, London, on Monday or Tuesday next, and that the evidence for the prosecution has been got up here by a private inquiry officer, who, it was stated, has been in the employment of the American Consul for several months past; and this officer, it was also stated, has the command and "drilling" of all the witnesses in Liverpool who are to be examined in this case. It was further stated that the authorities, on the part of the prosecution, would not produce any of the detective officers of this town who were engaged in the original inquiry that took place here. We do not vouch for the strict accuracy of the above, but give it as a rumor, emanating from a quarter well informed on the whole affair.

THE SPIRIT OF THE PRESS.

THE TIMES ON FERNANDO WOOD'S PEACE MEETING.

The London Times has an editorial on the Peace meeting recently held at New-York, under the auspices of FERNANDO WOOD and others. The Times sees in the meeting some reason for thinking that the civil war may be touching its close; but, at the same time, admits that it is a very doubtful question. It remarks that if the meeting should prove influential enough to liberate opinion, we may, perhaps, wonder six weeks hence how the strength of the war party could ever have lain—just as in France, after the fall of ROBESPIERRE, people asked each other who could have been the Jacobins? There is everything except the uncertainty of American politics, to make us regard such an event as probable. It would almost seem that the President himself would have no objection to peace if he knew how to reach it. Perhaps his meeting may show him the way. If an armistice were proclaimed, we believe that neither party would be in a hurry to renew the war, and the desire of peace would supply the two Governments with the strongest motive for coming to reasonable terms of separation.

MR. SPENCE REDIVIVUS.

Mr. SPENCE, of Liverpool, (the financial agent of the Secessionists,) has resumed his letters to the London Times. He contends that little or nothing has yet been effected in the work of subduing the South, expatiates on what the Southerners have done in the field, and asserts that a policy of exhaustion is likely to be more damaging to the North than the South. He holds out a gloomy prospect for the North if the struggle is allowed to go on for another year.

AN ANTI-SLAVERY DEPUTATION.

From the Manchester Examiner, June 18.

We understand that Rev. Dr. MORRIS, of London, and Rev. J. H. RYLAND, of St. Paul's, Westminster, have been appointed a deputation to the United States, to convey the address to ministers of all Christian denominations in America, adopted by the recent Anti-Slavery Conference. Mr. RYLAND sailed on the 10th inst., in the City of New-York, and Dr. MORRIS followed, on the 17th, in the City of Baltimore. They also carry a letter from Mr. THOMAS B. POTTER to President LINCOLN, inclosing reports of the Anti-Slavery Conference and public meeting in the Free Trade Hall, on the 3d inst., and copies of the French pastors' address and English reply.

A REQUISITION ON THE LORD MAYOR.

A requisition to the Lord Mayor was in course of signature in the City of London, urging his Lordship to call and preside over a public meeting to petition Parliament to promote the restoration of peace in America.

PARLIAMENTARY PROCEEDINGS.

POLISH AFFAIRS.

In the House of Commons on the 18th ult., Mr. W. G. FOSTER gave notice that he should move an amendment to Mr. HENNESSY'S projected motion with respect to Poland, which would make the resolution read as follows: "That this House thanks Her Majesty for communicating the correspondence on the affairs of Poland, and learns with regret that the Emperor of Russia has persisted in violating the stipulations of the treaty of Vienna, to which Great Britain, in concert with the other great Powers, was a party, and that this House earnestly prays Her Majesty to signify to the Emperor of Russia that, in consequence of the violation of the stipulations of this treaty, Great Britain is freed from the contract therein concluded."

THE SPITHEAD FORTIFICATIONS.

Lord PALMERSTON, in reply to Sir M. PETO, said that Government would introduce a bill on the subject of a loan for fortifications, and he would then state its intentions with respect to the suspended forts at Spithead.

The bill making provision for the prosecution of public works in the manufacturing districts as a means of relieving the distress was debated at some length and finally passed to a second reading. The expediency of encouraging emigration was largely dwelt upon by some speakers.

Mr. CORDEN gave it as his opinion that the prospect of the next Winter is worse than the last for the poor operatives.

POLISH AFFAIRS AGAIN.

In the House of Lords, on the 19th, Lord STRATFORD DE REDCLIFFE called attention to the murderous state of affairs in Poland, and expressed his doubts of diplomacy being able to accomplish a satisfactory solution.

Earl RUSSELL said in a short time he should be able to lay further papers on the table. On the 17th England, France and Austria sent their new diplomatic notes to St. Petersburgh.

Lord BROUGHAM incidentally remarked that he was afraid atrocities were inherent in civil war both in Europe and America.

THE RUPTURE WITH BRAZIL.

The Earl of MALMESBURY called attention to the rupture with Brazil, and thought it more serious than generally supposed. He found fault with the proceedings of Government in the matter.

Earl RUSSELL defended his course, and stated that the only principle on which Government had acted was, that it was the duty of a foreign Government to protect the vessels of an another State within their jurisdiction.

Lord CHELMSFORD argued that the proceedings of the Government had been unjustifiable.

The proceedings in the house of Commons on the 19th were unimportant.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Queen of Prussia had arrived at Windsor Castle on a friendly visit to Queen VICTORIA.

The trial trips of the magnificent new iron-plated frigate Royal Oak had been concluded with an almost unparalleled degree of success, both in her steaming and steering qualifications.

Prince ALFRED is gazetted as a Knight of the Garter.

The steam fire engine "Manhattan," which arrived from New-York per Great Eastern, along with a delegation from the New-York Fire Department, was to be exhibited in Liverpool on the day the China sailed. It was to go thence to the Crystal Palace, London.

LORD PALMERSTON ON FOREIGN RELATIONS.

On Wednesday evening, June 17, the Lord Mayor and the Lady Mayoress gave a grand banquet to Lord PALMERSTON and Her Majesty's Ministers, at the Mansion House, where a large and distinguished company were invited to do them honor. In responding to the toast of the evening, Lord PALMERSTON said: I may congratulate you upon the healthful and prosperous condition of the commercial interests of the country. [Cheers.] In human affairs there are difficulties which appear greater at a distance than when they are boldly faced and when we approach nearer to meet them. For many years it was supposed that if any event, political or physical, should deprive this country of that staple of its industry—cotton—ruin, bankruptcy, desolation would be the inevitable consequence. The difficulty has come. That calamity has fallen upon us. We have survived it; and although I do not mean to deny that in parts of the country, and with regard to large portions of our manufacturing and commercial industry it has been accompanied by great and severe distress, yet taking the nation at large we are happy to find that general industry and commerce have not suffered, that our commerce has sustained scarcely any diminution—and that in spite of that calamity the revenue of the country has been in a prosperous and healthy condition, enabling the Government to propose important and great reductions of taxation (Cheers.) Well, gentlemen, prosperity, national prosperity and commercial prosperity, depend greatly on the continuance of peace; and although there may be questions pending which are of a grave character, yet I trust we may flatter ourselves that these questions are susceptible of friendly, satisfactory, and peaceful solution by the mode of negotiation instead of by the appeal to arms. (Cheers.) This country may boast that its relations with all the other nations of Europe, and I will say, too, of America, in spite of little outpourings of sentiment not so friendly—(cheers)—we may boast that our relations with the other nations of the world are friendly, and there are two Powers upon whose friendship and understanding, or upon whose differences and enmities, mainly depend the questions of peace or of disturbance in Europe—I mean England and France. [Cheers.] I am happy to say that on all those great questions upon which the issues of peace and war depend, whether in the far West or in the distant East, there exists between the Governments of England and France the most frank and honorable concert. [Loud cheers.] The great interests of these two important countries must be identical, and the Governments of both are sufficiently enlightened to know that those interests lie in the same direction. And if any pledge were required of the friendly disposition which animates the Emperor of the French, I would point to my honorable and distinguished friend on my left, Baron GROS, the French Ambassador—[cheers]—a man who has had much intercourse in many parts of the world with British diplomatists, and whose intercourse has invariably been of the most friendly character, honorable to his country and courteous and friendly to his allies. [Loud cheers.] I hold, my lords and gentlemen, that the presence of Baron GROS, as representing the Emperor of the French in London, is a pledge of the sincerity of the alliance between the two countries. [Cheers.] I trust that there are no clouds on the horizon which may not vanish and melt away into thin air, and whatever questions may still be pending—and I don't disguise that there are questions of great importance pending—I hope negotiations, conducted upon the principles of justice and of right, may lead those questions to a happy solution, and that nothing may occur to retard that progress of civilization, of industry, of art, and of intelligence which, I trust, the nations of the earth are destined uninterruptedly to follow. [Cheers.]

THE DISCOVERERS OF THE SOURCE OF THE NILE —ARRIVAL OF MESSRS. SPEKE AND GRANT AT SOUTHAMPTON.

Correspondence of the London News.

SOUTHAMPTON, Wednesday, June 17, 1863.

The Pera has arrived with Capts. SPEKE and GRANT, the discoverers of the source of the Nile. Both gentlemen have nearly recovered from the frightful hardships they have undergone during the last three years. They are tall, well-knit men, and well qualified for African traveling. Capt. GRANT suffered much from fever; but he now seems the healthiest of the two. He only experiences pains now from old wounds, having lost part of his hand at the siege of Lucknow. Capt. SPEKE suffered in Africa from a disease in one of his lungs. They describe the countries through which they have passed as marvelously fertile, and they saw large accumulations of ivory on their route; they have brought home the horns and skull of a gigantic buffalo which they shot near the Equator; they saw cotton and every tropical product growing with great luxuriance. They have examined the Mountains of the Moon, and found them to be clusters of hills over whose sides torrents of rain flow into the Lake Nyanza, the fountain of the Nile, and cause the periodical flow of that river. They met with deserts to the north and south of the Equator, but comparatively of no great magnitude. Although Capt. SPEKE had previously visited the Lake Nyanza, he had great difficulty in reaching it this time. They were frequently robbed of everything by the barbarous people whom they have encountered during their travels. Some of their Zanzibar guides would not share the hardships of the travelers, and turned back; but a number remained faithful, and accompanied the Englishmen as far as Cairo, where their photographs were taken and have been brought to England; they are nearly naked, and are gigantic looking savages of various tribes. As soon as the Pera arrived here the consul at Zanzibar and a number of gentlemen went on board to welcome the distinguished travelers and congratulate them on the discoveries they had made and the fame they had achieved. The Custom-house authorities here were instructed by Earl RUSSELL to pass their baggage free, and afford every facility for the travelers to proceed to London.

Before they left Southampton the Mayor, F. PEAKINS, Esq., and a number of gentlemen, had an interview with them at the station. His worship addressed them in a few appropriate words of welcome:

The distinguished travelers replied to the welcome with deep emotion. They expressed their gratitude for the welcome they had received from Englishmen and the representatives of such an important town as Southampton, and gave some interesting particulars of their travels. They described the magnificent countries they had passed through. The places that had been marked on the maps of equatorial Africa as deserts they had found reveling in exuberant vegetation. They had brought home beautiful specimens of some of the wonders they had seen. The great drawback to trade with the countries in which they had dwelt was the fear and suspicion of the inhabitants. In three years they had traversed 3,000 miles in a straight line. They had gone round the great lake, the source of the Nile, and which was 150 miles broad. They had often, from delays and opposition, only been able to make headway about a mile a day, but by perseverance they had overcome all difficulties.

The Mayor invited them to a banquet, which he declared would show them the estimation in which the people of Southampton held them for solving the great geographical problem as to the source of that sacred river which had engaged the attention of Kings and conquerors from the remotest ages. Capts. SPEKE and GRANT, however, regretted that their immediate engagements would prevent them from accepting the proffered hospitality of the Mayor, but they intimated that they would embrace the first opportunity to again visit Southampton. They made some humorous remarks on the extent of their baggage. They had a few boxes of specimens, but their "carpet" bags consisted of two untanned sheep skins. They had lost everything amidst the perils they had encountered. They had passed through those distant and gloomy abodes described by the poet, and heard and seen the

> Calling shapes and beckoning shadows dire,
> And aery tongues that syllable men's names
> On sands and shores, and desert wildernesses.

They left for London by the 11½ A. M. train.

FRANCE.

The King of Sweden had added his congratulations upon the fall of Puebla, to those of the various other Sovereigns already reported.

The rumor that M. SAINTOIS, the French Ambassador at Turin, and M. TALLYRAND, Ambassador at Brussels, are about to request leave of absence from their diplomatic posts, is unfounded.

The harvest in the extreme south of France had commenced under favorable conditions. The French corn markets were generally advancing.

AUSTRIA.

The Council of the Empire was opened on the 18th. The following is a summary of the speech from the throne: The Emperor makes a satisfactory retrospect of the activity of the Reichsrath, and expresses a hope that Transylvania will also shortly take part in its deliberation. His Majesty continues: The Reichsrath closed its first session under the blessings of peace, which the Government will endeavor to maintain undisturbed. Thanks to the liberal institutions of the Empire, its material and intellectual life is everywhere being rapidly developed, and its influence and position as a Great Power continually becoming more and more satisfactory. The credit of the State and the public currency have most decidedly improved. It has been unnecessary to apply for any extraordinary credit during the current year. The budget, which will be submitted, has been prepared with a view to the greatest possible economy. The speech concludes by enumerating the various measures of local reforms which are to be brought forward.

ITALY.

The Italian Parliament had been engaged in debating the general policy of the Government. Ministerial explanations were given, and confidence was expressed in the Emperor NAPOLEON'S course, notwithstanding the continued occupation of Rome by France.

Gen. BIXIO advised the interruption of relations with France, who, while occupying Rome, does not prevent the organization of brigandage.

THE POLISH QUESTION.

The diplomatic notes upon the Polish question addressed to Russia by the three Powers, were dispatched to St. Petersburgh on the 18th.

The Paris Patrie publishes an article, reviewing the atrocities committed by the Russians in Poland, and declaring that no hopes can be entertained of any benefit arising from diplomacy. The writer calls upon France, in conjunction with other friendly nations, to intervene actively for the reestablishment of an independent Poland.

The insurrection was increasing in Volhynia, but the peasantry remained passive.

It is asserted that the Russian Government evinced a spirit of conciliation, and a desire to receive the notes of the three Powers favorably; but nevertheless, great preparations continued to be made at Cronstadt and other naval and military arsenals, and, according to some rumors, the Russian reply was likely to be unfavorable.

THE SCHLESWIG-HOLSTEIN QUESTION.

In the Federal Diet at Frankfort, the Special Committees on the Affairs of Holstein brought in their report proposing that the Danish Government should be requested to withdraw its ordinance of the 30th of March. The Danish representative of the Diet handed in a protest against the report of the Committee. The proposal will be submitted to the vote of the Diet upon the 7th of July.

It is asserted that the British Government will be prepared to act with energy in case German troops march into Holstein, and France will act with Great Britain. A strong naval demonstration at the mouth of the Elbe is spoken of.

INDIA.

Calcutta letters of May 15, and Bombay May 24, have arrived.

Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India had sent out telegraphic orders to the Government of Bombay to fortify Bombay harbor without delay, and put it in a complete state of defence.

The experiment made with Peruvian cotton seed at Coimbatore in November last, has proved a failure. The plants appeared for a time healthy and promising, but were entirely destroyed by worms.

The cotton crop was pouring into the market at Bombay, but it will be impossible to bring in what is now in transit before the rains.

The prizes offered by the Bombay Government for cotton have been without any effect, and the Government now states that the realization of good prices on the spot appears the best and most acceptable reward to the producer.

POLITICAL AND MILITARY ASPECTS.

A Strange Chapter of Events—Ohio Nominations—Vicksburgh and the Potomac—Ohio Politics—Nomination of Vallandigham—Its Probable Result—Defences of Vicksburgh—Our Failure in Engineering—The Potomac Armies—Our Failure in Generalship.

THE BRECHES, Thursday, June 18, 1863.

Yesterday the Union men of Ohio made their nominations, as the Bluelight Democrats did theirs the week previous. Both of them are very remarkable, in one particular, not mentioned by the Press. Both of them have passed by entirely the young, earnest men of the last two years, to take up the men of twenty years ago. Neither of them have gained much by the operation—I mean politically. It is about two years since I wrote to the TIMES an account of the Breckinridge meeting at Columbus, in which I stated, that though small in numbers, its leaders were the substantial men of the party, and predicted the defeat of the Democratic party, and said that if "it ever again rise, the Breckinridge wing will be the legitimates." "They can lose no more now, and if the party live again they will rise. But alas, for the hopes of man! The Democratic party, which once was, will never live again in the same body." Everything has taken place as I said. BRECKINRIDGE went into rebellion, and will soon be consigned to his final doom. In the meanwhile, the old leaders of the Breckinridge wing have gradually been bringing the true blues of their party into sympathy with BRECKINRIDGE and the rebellion. They stand now precisely where the peace Federalists did in 1814, and their conventions bear the exact stamp of the Hartford Convention. The nomination of VALLANDIGHAM is a mere sequence of the political movement of the old Democratic leaders for the last two years. The remainder of my prediction will, I think, be found equally true. The Democratic party, as now organized, will not attain power in twenty years. That, with the name and colors of the party, it may command the main vote of the partisans is no doubt true. But, this is only the better for its opponents; since experience shows that a party which makes sharp and unpopular issues, and is yet strong enough to command a considerable vote, is sure to be in the minority forever. I need not say that VALLANDIGHAM will be immensely defeated, notwithstanding the advantage of a rebel nomination and a Tory Convention. But, is not the fact of his nomination a very remarkable one? Is it not a strange event? Yesterday, the Union Convention made its nominations. Every paper in the State will tell you it is a strong nomination. That is one of the views of the case; and in regard to the personnel is true. JOHN BROUGH is a man of great executive ability, a most powerful debater, and a man of high reputation for integrity and patriotism. Dr. DONEY (renominated) has filled his place well. STOCKING HUNTER is an able, sterling lawyer, of the old school; and the other nominations are very fair. But, you will observe, that not a man on it belongs to the late school of politics. Two are oldfashioned Democrats, and four are oldfashioned Whigs. The Whigs are no doubt good enough Republicans, but they did not belong to the young guard, who drove the enemy from the field. I mention this only as one of the strange signs of the times. All things are merged in the war, and I think, ought to be. The Union ticket is the strongest ever nominated in the State negatively, for its opponent is VALLANDIGHAM. The result probably will be to condense what remains of the old Democracy into a compact but defeated corps, which will be alike unsuccessful and impracticable.

Let us now turn to the WAR—where the chapter of events seem to be equally strange. The main point of interest is Vicksburgh. I am afraid the time required for the capture of Vicksburgh will be longer than we suppose. Why? Because the army there has a General, (which seems to be the great deficiency on the Potomac,) but has no Engineer, that I can find out. If GRANT and his army have to fight they will beat the rebels to their utter destruction cargo of cotton and turpentine belonging partly to the owner of the vessel and partly to the master, Vessel and cargo condemned and forfeited.

The United States vs. The Schooner Mary Jane and Cargo.—Motion on behalf of the claimants to allow a rehearing on further proofs denied.

The United States vs. The Schooner Odd Fellow and Cargo.—This vessel was captured by the gunboat Monticello on April 15, 1863, off Little River, N. C. No one intervened in the suit for vessel or cargo. The master testified that he lived in Wilmington, and owned the vessel, and ran the blockade of Wilmington with her on the morning of the day she was captured, bound to Nassau, and destroyed the papers of the vessel.

Vessel condemned and forfeited.

The United States vs. The Schooner Levi Rowe.—This suit was brought to a hearing in January last, and the Court was of the opinion that the libelants had not furnished adequate proof for the condemnation of the vessel, but allowed them a year within which to furnish it.

The case was again brought before the Court on the additional evidence of an assistant surgeon on board the gunboat Mount Vernon, by which the capture was made, testifying to the capture of the vessel, which was heading into New Topsail Inlet, and about three miles and a half from the shore, but when she saw the Mount Vernon, turned and headed out to sea.

Vessel condemned and forfeited.

United States Circuit Court.

Before Judge Shipman.

The Grand Jury came into Court with indictments in the following cases:

The United States vs. J. C. Burke.—An indictment for forging orders for the purpose of obtaining money from the Government of the United States. Burke, as we understand, has recently been commissioned by Gov. Seymour to raise a regiment.

The United States vs. Isaac V. D. Reeve.—Two indictments for transmitting to the Government false writings in support of a claim against the Government. Reeve gave bail in $5,000.

The Grand Jury were then discharged for the term.

The Value of Southern Debts.

SUPREME COURT—CIRCUIT.

Before Justice Leonard.

Smith et al. vs. Graydon.—This action was brought to recover the amount of four promissory notes executed by the defendants in the sum of about $5,000.

In case of a recovery upon the notes, the defendants set up a composition deed, executed to them by the plaintiffs in the following words:

"It is provided, however, that if the said Graydon, McCreery & Co. shall find it necessary to make an assignment or other general disposition of their property, and shall secure the payment of said fifty per cent of our debts, either by preference in such assignment after confidential debts, or by turning out property or collaterals to secure the same; and if by such means we shall eventually receive payment to extent of said fifty per cent., then, and without regard to the time above limited, such payment shall be in full discharge of our respective debts."

The defendants proved the execution of an assignment containing a preference of the plaintiffs in the sum of 50 per cent.

The plaintiffs claimed that the defendants should show that all of the debts before the preference in the assignment were confidential debts, that the assignment was necessary, and that they would "eventually receive payment to extent of said 50 per cent."

The Court held that the defendants need not show that the assignment was necessary, or the preferred debts confidential, but that the onus of showing the eventual payment to plaintiffs of 50 per cent, rested with the defendants, and declined to follow the ruling of Justice CLERKE upon the same question upon a former trial of the action.

The plaintiffs insisted that the deed was void, inasmuch as it extended the time of payment without a new and distinct consideration, and that the agreement to prefer in the assignment was in effect an agreement to pay a debt already due, and formed no consideration.

That the extension of the time of payment being indefinite and uncertain was void.

But the Court held that the question of eventual payment was one of fact for the Jury.

A large share of the assets of the defendants, amounting to $90,000, consisted of debts scattered throughout the rebellious States, and it was claimed that they were of no value, and that no "eventual payment" would be realized from them.

Many witnesses were examined. Some testified that Southern debts were worthless—not worth collecting, and that no collections were practicable. Others testified that the market value in New-York of Southern debts was from three to five per cent.

The jury found that the fifty per cent. agreed upon in the composition deed would eventually be paid, thus estimating the value of Southern debts at five per cent.

An appeal has been taken.

Cravy, Feeter & Cronin for plaintiff; Swan & Parsons for defendants.

The Ruggles Will Case.

SURROGATE'S COURT—KINGS COUNTY.

Before Surrogate Brainerd.

This important case, which involves some $300,000, was continued this day, pursuant to adjournment.

The first witness called was Mr. Daniel Bedel. He testified that he resided in Cranberry-street, nearly opposite the testator's house; that he knew Mr. Ruggles for about sixteen years; that at 2 o'clock on the morning of his decease he was called from his bed to witness a will for Mr. Ruggles; that he went to his house and was told by a lady that they thought the doctor would answer; he then went to the testator's room and stood at the foot of his bed, directly in front of him, about fifteen minutes; that Mr. Ruggles then lay on his back, and some four or five persons were present; a man on each side raised him up and gave him some drink; one asked him if he would have drink, but could get no answer from him; he attempted to say something, and persons beside him, judging from their actions, wanted to hear what it was; I discovered by his disconnected sentences that he wanted something done for some Irishman; there was a table near his bed, with lights and papers on it; I heard the remark, "We, in the presence of each other"—the same expression that witnesses use; while I was there Mr. Ruggles did not recognize me; I don't believe he saw me; his left eye was closed, and the other I did not see open at all; that was so all the time I was there; his breathing was hasty; when he attempted to speak it was an undertone—a guttural sound; he was most gone—very weak; his face was swollen; I don't think he was capable of transacting any business; after a few minutes it was said the room was wanted to be cleared; some one wanted to be alone with Mr. Ruggles; I then passed out of the room with others.

Mr. A. S. Slotoff was then examined—He did he was the husband of Lucy, one of the devisees; was present when Mr. Nichols copied the will, but not when it was executed; was present while Mr. Bedel was there; was one of the persons who gave Mr. Ruggles drink; do not remember who assisted me.

The testimony of this witness did not seem very material, as he answered to many questions that he did not remember.

Those who are interested in this case will obtain further and more important particulars than are given in this report, by referring to the official minutes in the Surrogate's office.

WEDNESDAY, July 1—P. M.

There is a much improved confidence on the Stock Exchange and in Wall-street to-day, on the War advices in the morning papers and the subsequent dispatches from Pennsylvania. The price of Gold Coin is 2 ₱ cent. down, and Bills on London and Paris for the Scotia's mail this afternoon left off 1¼@2 ₱ cent. lower than the sales of yesterday. The Government Stocks and Treasury paper, at the Stock Exchange, are ⅛@1 ₱ cent. higher, and the Railway Share list shows an average improvement of 2 ₱ cent. under a more decided speculative demand than for several days previous. The numerous heavy disbursements of Money for the 1st July Dividends on United States, State, Bank and other securities, have thrown a considerable amount of Money on the Street for temporary employment, and although the full effect of this was scarcely felt to-day, there was less difficulty among borrowers than yesterday in making up their wants.

The coupon United States six ₱ cents. of 1881 advanced to 104¼ ex-dividend, equal with the premium on the Gold drawn to-day, to 108⅜ ₱ cent. The 7-30 ₱ cents. of 1864 rose 1@1⅛ ₱ cent. and Treasury Certificates of 1864, ⅜ ₱ cent. New-York Central and Erie are each 1½ ₱ cent. up; Hudson River five ₱ cent. over the advanced sales of yesterday, and Harlem four ₱ cent. higher. The Western Roads and Philadelphia and Reading show a recovery of 2@3 ₱ cent., and Pacific Mail 4½ ₱ cent. The general market in the afternoon was firm, and the feeling of the Street quite reversed from yesterday, both in reference to the military situation and the prospects of the Money Market. The Second Board of the Stock Exchange now breaks up at three o'clock, and our final quotations are made to close half an hour earlier than heretofore. The following were about the prices, in comparison with last night:

The receipts into the Treasury to-day for the 5-20 years 6 ₱ cent. Loan, at par, amount to $1,198,550, of which $791,000 was paid in through the Loan Agency, and $407,550 in subscriptions direct at the Treasury office.

The Directors of the Illinois Central Railroad Company give notice to the shareholders that the net earnings during the last six months have exceeded 3 ₱ cent. on the capital stock. They have made a dividend of 2 ₱ cent., and reserve the surplus until the declaration of the next semi-annual dividend, with the expectation at that time of paying a dividend of 4 ₱ cent., in order to cancel the lien upon 345,000 acres of land now held in trust for the payment of the interest on the full paid stock, and thus transfer the proceeds of the said lands to the general interest fund of the Company.

Resolved, That there be a dividend of 2 ₱ cent., free from Government tax, upon all the shares and canceled bonds scrip standing in the names of holders on the books of the Company at the close of business on the 20th day of July, inst., payable on and after the 1st day of August, upon all shares, the call upon which shall have been duly paid. And that the dividend upon the full paid stock shall be a discharge of the interests payable thereon the first day of January next, and payable upon surrender of the coupons issued thereon.

The State of Indiana is put in default to-day on the half-yearly interest due on her Public Debt, by reason of the discreditable and purely partisan conduct of one of her officials, the new Transfer and Pay Agent of the State in the City of New-York. The ability of the Treasury is not in the question, by his own admission. There is some informality of legislation wanting to enable the proper requisition to be made upon the Treasury. This difficulty the Governor had arranged to overcome until the next meeting of the Legislature, through Messrs. WINSLOW, LANIER & Co., Bankers, of this City, and for very many years connected with the financial and banking interests of Indiana. But it will be seen from the correspondence which we copy below from this afternoon's Commercial, that they have been denied the privilege, in every way possible, of intervening for the honor of the State, by the Agent referred to, who alone controls the Stock list in New-York, and the powers of attorney filed by numerous foreign and domestic holders for drawing the interest:

INDIANA JULY INTEREST.

From the Commercial Advertiser.

The State of Indiana has made default in the payment of the interest on its debt due this day, being the first instance of default since its compromise with its creditors sixteen years ago. The occasion of this is not the want of funds, but from political disagreement among its political parties, and the refusal of one of them to furnish those who wished to protect the honor of the State with the vouchers, by the aid of which only could the intention be carried out with safety to themselves.

This is most clearly shown in the subjoined correspondence:

NEW-YORK, June 22, 1863.

Messrs. Winslow, Lanier & Co.:

GENTLEMEN: You are already informed of the difficulty in Indiana in regard to paying the interest on the funded debt of the State. Without entering into the cause of this trouble, allow me to say that if it is in your power to meet and pay this interest as it shall fall due, you will confer a great favor upon the people of the State, who will without doubt fully reimburse and indemnify you. Should you do this, I pledge whatever official and personal influence I may have that the State shall make you whole.

Very truly yours, O. P. MORTON.

BANKING OFFICE OF WINSLOW, LANIER & Co.,
No. 52 WALL-STREET, NEW-YORK, June 24, 1863.

Gov. O. P. Morton:

DEAR SIR: We are in the receipt of your letter of the 22d inst., requesting us to protect the credit of the State of Indiana, by paying the interest on the funded debt, falling due on the 1st of next month, as the officers of State, for reasons publicly known, will hereby decline paying the same. The non-payment of this interest will, indeed, be highly injurious to the credit of that State, and mortifying to her citizens, and, in its consequences, injurious to creditors generally. The State of Indiana, since the arrangement made with her creditors in 1847, has promptly met the interest on her debt, under all circumstances, and at times during great pecuniary embarrassment in the country. To fail now in meeting the same, with ample means in the treasury for that purpose, cannot be satisfactorily explained.

Having for a long time been citizens of that State, and identified with its credit and prosperity, we should regret its default in meeting its obligations. We have, therefore, for the sake of protecting its credit, come to the determination that we will pay the July interest as requested. To do this, however, safely and satisfactorily, we must have a certified copy of the pay-roll, containing the names of the creditors, and the amount of dividend due to each on the 1st July, from the office of the agent of the State in this City.

It will be necessary for us when we pay to take from each creditor an assignment of the amount of interest due to each, with power of attorney to collect the same, when the agent of the state is in funds to that end.

Very respectfully,
WINSLOW, LANIER & CO.

BANKING OFFICE OF WINSLOW, LANIER & Co.,
No. 52 Wall-st.,
NEW-YORK, June 24, 1863.

John C. Walker, Esq., Agent of the State of Indiana:

DEAR SIR: It being now quite certain that the next July interest on the funded debt of the State of Indiana will not be paid, for reasons publicly known, we have, at the earnest solicitation of Gov. MORTON and other citizens of that State, agreed to pay the same to the holders of the certificates of indebtedness, to protect the credit of the State. To do this safely to ourselves, we must take an assignment from each creditor of the amount of interest due, with power of attorney to collect the same. To enable us to do this satisfactorily, we must have a certified copy of your pay roll for July, or list, giving the names of the holders, as also the amount of dividend due to each.

We, therefore, respectfully request that you furnish us with the same at as early a day prior to the day of payment as your convenience will allow. We shall expect to pay you all expenses that may be incurred in and about furnishing the same. We shall be pleased to hear from you as soon as convenient.

Yours, truly,
WINSLOW, LANIER & CO.

OFFICE INDIANA STATE AGENCY,
NEW-YORK, June 25, 1863.

Messrs. Winslow, Lanier & Co.:

GENTLEMEN: Your favor of the 24th inst. has been received and duly considered. In reply I beg leave to say that in common with every citizen of Indiana, I am exceedingly anxious that the creditors of our State shall be promptly paid that which is due them. The State has amply provided for them all. Her Treasury is full, and her tax-payers will keep it so, for every lawful demand. All that is needed is that the Legislature shall have an opportunity to make the appropriations, to give the financial officers of the State authority to disburse the funds.

I hope it is correct, as you state in your letter, that the "reasons" why the "next July interest on the funded debt of the State of Indiana," will not be paid at that time, "are publicly known." The people of Indiana, with the issues before the country upon them, elected a majority of Democrats to represent them in the Legislature of the State. To prevent the legislation demanded by the people, the Republican minority of the House of Representatives, instigated by Gov. MORTON, and in violation of their sworn duty, deserted their posts, and left that body without a quorum to do business.

By this revolutionary proceeding, the act appropriating moneys to defray the expenses of the State debt, to carry on the benevolent institutions, and to keep up the State prisons, failed to become laws. In consequence of this there are thousands of creditors of the State at home who suffer already for their just dues, and, as you mention, the credit of the State abroad is also about to suffer for the anticipated failure to meet the accruing interest on the funded debt. The majority of the Legislature are anxious and ready to make those appropriations, not only to pay yourselves and the class of creditors to whom you refer, but other creditors for a larger amount whose claims are equally just.

Through you, Gov. MORTON now asks me, as an officer of the State, whose duties the law prescribes, to cooperate with him, and to furnish the records and facilities of my office, for what purpose? Not to facilitate the State to pay her interest, or to add to her pecuniary resources—for the arrangement you propose is only a transfer of some portion of the indebtedness to other hands. And you plainly state that you ask this not as an individual about to buy and operate on the certificates of the State in the business way, but as such records are needful to information, but in connection with certain suggestions entered upon "at the earnest solicitation of Gov. MORTON, and other citizens of this State."

For an officer of Indiana, who has respect for his duty to himself and his State, to become a party to Gov. MORTON'S purpose in this scheme is impossible. That object is not to "save the credit of the State," but to continue himself in his unlawful and disastrous purpose to override the Constitution and the laws of Indiana, to arrogate to himself the functions of all the other departments of the State Government, and to set at defiance the people and the Legislature. Gov. MORTON, if he is faithful to the duties of his office, and to the wishes and interests of Indiana, will promptly convene the Legislature, and let them, as they will, do it; his friends will remain at their posts, appropriate the money for the payment of the demands of her creditors.

The Governor prefers to rush into all sorts of temporizing expedients and shifts, bringing the good name and financial credit of his State into bad repute with every holder and hawker of claims against her. The honor and interest of Indiana require that her faithful servants and friends shall withdraw countenance from him in his mad career. The State does not need that creditors at home or abroad should be called upon to postpone their demands, nor, on the other hand, that individuals should be asked to advance money for her.

The party or parties who unnecessarily subject her to the shame of such apparent confession, or who seem to sanction it as being necessary in fact, only insult and dishonor her. Gov. MORTON has his partisan politics and his selfish ambition to prompt him, and I will not lend myself to a furtherance of his acts, which are revolutionary and ruinous. He has no right, after the people of Indiana have taxed themselves and filled their treasury for this purpose of paying their debts, still in his obstinacy to ask them to accept as a favor the advancement of funds from individuals to save them from his power.

Without, therefore, intending disrespect to you, gentlemen, I must decline to render assistance to the Governor in his attempt to carry on the State Government in defiance of law, and without that legislation which the Supreme Court has decided essential in the premises.

Truly yours,
J. C. WALKER,
Agent of the State of Indiana.

NEW-YORK, June 26, 1863.

John C. Walker, Esq., Agent of the State of Indiana:

Your letter of yesterday, in reply to ours of the 24th, is received.

We have nothing to say in reply, save to express our regret that the State should fail in paying the interest on her funded debt—as to where the fault lies in the premises, it is not for us to say. It has occurred to us, however, that we could shape our request in a manner that may meet your approbation. It is this: That you shall in the capacity of Agent of the State, go on and pay each creditor entitled thereto in your dividend books, taking the receips of each in the usual form. You to draw your official check on our house to the order of each party entitled thereto, expressing on the face of such check, that it is given for the July dividend on stock thus held or represented, giving the amount of such stock and of such interest. These checks we will pay, and hold the same as vouchers until we are reimbursed. In this way, the payment can be made in the usual manner, as the Agent has always heretofore paid, by drawing his checks on our house, or some other house, or Bank in this City.

As it is necessary for us to know whether or not we are to advance so large a sum of money by Wednesday next, we will thank you for an early reply.

Very truly,
WINSLOW, LANIER & CO.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

We have special dispatches from the headquarters of the Army of the Potomac to yesterday noon, which give some idea of the movements recently made, and which seem already to have resulted in great advantages for us. It appears now that the rebel cavalry force which made the recent raid on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad was the one under command of Stuart in person—his whole force, with eight pieces of artillery. They were at Westminster, Md., on Monday night. Early on Tuesday morning, Gen. Gregg, commanding a portion of our cavalry, made an attack upon Stuart, and drove him eighteen miles, from Westminster to Hanover. Gen. Kilpatrick subsequently attacked him and drove him out of Hanover, after a splendid fight, part of his force going toward Gettysburgh and part toward York. Gen. Kilpatrick captured fifty prisoners, including a Lieutenant-Colonel. During Tuesday a regiment was also driven out of Gettysburgh by Gen. Buford. From the best information obtainable yesterday, the rebels appeared to be concentrating their forces on a line running from Cashtown to Berlin. Cashtown is between Gettysburgh and Chambersburgh, and Berlin is about ten miles west of York. Appearances favored two suppositions—that the rebels were preparing to attempt to retreat with their plunder, or concentrating to give Gen. Meade battle. They are reported to have burned Cashtown on Monday, and twenty-five houses in Shippensburgh.

A dispatch from Harrisburgh, dated 9½ o'clock last night, states that a battle took place on Tuesday afternoon at Hanover Junction, between our cavalry, under Gen. Pleasanton, and the rebel cavalry. It lasted nearly the whole afternoon, and resulted in the defeat of the rebels, with a loss of four hundred killed, wounded and prisoners, besides six pieces of artillery. This appears to be a different engagement from either of those reported by our special correspondent, noticed above. At Harrisburgh, it is believed that the main body of Lee's forces is between Gettysburgh and Chambersburgh, and that a battle was fought yesterday between Gens. Meade and Lee, though how extensive, or with what result, it was impossible to ascertain. Heavy firing was heard during the whole evening, in the direction of Carlisle, but at a much greater distance.

A letter received in this City yesterday confirms the statement that Gens. Dix and Keyes are moving on Richmond with a heavy force. Our troops left Fort Magruder on the 23d ult., and arrived at White House on the 27th, marching in the daytime and encamping at night. The letter says: "We are now thirty-five miles from Williamsburgh and twenty-one from Richmond. I think that before you can answer this we will either have the city or be repulsed. Gen. Keyes told us this morning that he would be in Richmond by next Thursday, if at all within the range of possibility."

The Louisville Journal, of Monday, notices a rumor, which reached that city on Saturday, to the effect that Huntsville, Ala., had been captured by our forces. No verification of the story has reached us.

A rumor was in circulation in Philadelphia recently that Gov. Curtin and Gen. Cameron had telegraphed a demand to Washington that Gen. McClellan should be restored to his old command. The statement having been called to Gov. Curtin's attention, he denied its truth most positively, adding that he had never interfered at any time between the War Department and Gen. McClellan.

A letter to the Philadelphia Inquirer states that the captured iron-clad Atlanta, now at Port Royal, proves to be not sufficiently seaworthy for active service.

The Bermuda Royal Gazette, of June 23, announces the arrival there of Vallandigham, on board the rebel steamer Lady Davis, from Wilmington. He is said to be going to Canada. The Lady Davis is supposed to have carried out important dispatches for the British Government. There were twelve blockade runners at Wilmington on the 16th of June.

FROM EUROPE.

Two steamers arrived from Liverpool yesterday—the China at this port, and the North American off Father Point—bringing advices from Europe three days later. The news is interesting. As an instance of how the operations of the rebel pirates are affecting our commerce, it is stated that forty to fifty guineas insurance premium was paid on the 20th, on the ship Caledonia, bound to Liverpool from Oporto, several days overdue, having sailed on the 8th inst. Mr. Slidell, the rebel Envoy, had had a very long conference with the French Emperor. The Emperor sent for him, and had a private tête-à-tête with him at breakfast. This interview has given strength to the rumor that a renewed offer of mediation in American affairs, by Louis Napoleon, is likely to be the result of the fall of Puebla. Warlike rumors, growing out of the Polish question, were again prevalent in Paris. Several Russian papers fully anticipate war with France. Meantime the revolution seems to gain new vigor every day. Skirmishes are numerous, and generally result in favor of the revolutionists. The Liverpool Cotton market was dull and unchanged. Breadstuffs and Provisions were dull. Consols, 92¼@92⅜ for money.

FROM MEXICO.

The news from Mexico, by way of Acapulco and San Francisco, is of the highest importance. Dates from the Capital are to the 6th of June. Juarez and his Cabinet had decided upon evacuating the city, believing that a more effectual resistance to the French could be made outside the walls. The Government therefore moved to San Luis Potosi on the 31st of May, taking with them all movable firearms and munitions of war, and two millions of dollars from the Treasury. The principal leaders of the Church party held a meeting in the City of Mexico on the 1st of June, and sent a commission to Gen. Forey, offering their allegiance to the French Emperor. Forey had, in consequence, occupied the main entrance to the city, with one division, to protect the Church party, and the whole French army was expected to occupy the city on the 8th. Three newspapers had already been established in the French interest, and it had been announced that the Democratic element was to be extirpated. Forey had issued a decree confiscating the property of all in arms against the French.

GENERAL NEWS.

The Emancipation ordinance passed through the Missouri State Convention yesterday. Slavery is to be abolished in 1870.

The Board of Education met last evening, and beside the routine business adopted a resolution, from the Committee on Warming and Ventilation, in favor of the employment of a permanent engineer of the Board to superintend the heating apparatus of the various school-houses, at a salary of $1,200 per annum. Mr. William Dunham was elected by ballot to fill the position. A resolution, offered by Commissioner Smith, was adopted directing the President and Clerk to withhold further supplies from the School Officers of the Ninth Ward, until they comply with the request of the Board to reinstate the school-teacher named Catharine McGee, who was dismissed for insubordination in refusing to sing the chorus of a song called "The Battle Hymn of the Republic."

The Stock Exchange rose yesterday 1@2 ₩ cent., (and on Hudson River, Harlem, Pacific Mail and some of the Western Roads,) from 3@5 ₩ cent. The Government Stocks were 1 ₩ cent. higher and Treasury paper 1@1½ ₩ cent. higher than on Tuesday. Coin fell 2 ₩ cent. and Exchange 1½@2 ₩ cent.

Breadstuffs, Cotton and Petroleum were less sought after yesterday and were generally cheaper. Provisions, Tallow, Hay, Leather, Fish and Wool, were in fair demand. Hides were less active. A moderate business was transacted in Groceries. A Government contract for 600,000 lbs. Rio Coffee, green, roasted and ground, was awarded at from $30 20@$36 45 ₩ 100 lbs. Freights were inactive, with 657 vessels of all classes in port.

Northern Prosperity a Damage to the War.

It is somewhat paradoxical, but strictly true, notwithstanding, that the greatest disadvantage of the war is the prosperity of the country. Everybody admits that, in the main, the industry of the North is very flourishing. The farms teem, the workshops and the factories whir, and the bustle of trade fills the streets. Labor was never in greater demand, or more largely paid. The industry of the country has recovered from the terrible shock given it by the first outbreak of the war; it has adapted itself to the new condition of things, and in new channels is putting forth its energies with an activity, and with a success, seldom if ever surpassed before. Taking all classes of society into account, it may, with very little risk, be averred that in no year in the history of the country has there been so little destitution and so much physical comfort throughout the North, as has prevailed thus far in this third year of the war.

Of course this prosperity is pleasant to think of in itself, but its bearing upon the fortune of the war is by no means so satisfactory. There can be no doubt that it has operated very much to divert the public mind from the dreadful dangers of the country. People, almost insensibly to themselves, have come to feel that the war was no great misfortune, after all, and that it don't matter much whether it is soon ended or not. They have noticed that it did not seem to be conducted with much discretion, but have taken this very little to heart. It was simply a good subject to growl over when one happened to be in a growling humor. The general disposition has been to assume that it would all come out right in the end, and to take up with the philosophy that, "the less said, the sooner mended." The prime object of attention has been the day's private business—the war being simply a matter of incidental interest.

The extent to which the Northern mind has lapsed into this easy confidence was signally illustrated by the manner in which Lee's irruption into Pennsylvania was first met in that State. The inhabitants in both country and town were at first at an utter loss what to make of it. For days after the advance had passed the border, they remained incredulous that anything serious could be designed; and their chief solicitude was to get their horses and pigs out of the reach of chance stragglers. The idea of rallying to drive back a hostile invader never occurred to them. It was not believed that he was an invader at all—but simply an unexpected guest of rather loose habits, making it advisable to look a little after the spoons. The brisk démarche of the "Burgess of York," seven miles out, to hunt up some Confederate officer to whom he could surrender the burgh, was only a manifestation of the prevailing free and easy spirit; and the astonishment of that functionary, when he was promptly assured by Gen. Early of the conditions on which the surrender would be accepted—one hundred and fifty thousand dollars in cash, 40,000 pounds of beef, and flour, coffee, sugar and other groceries to match—was simply of a piece with the general bewilderment when it began to dawn upon the public mind of the State that this was an actual invasion of an enemy, and a very serious business. The last accounts from the State indicate that the people are at last arousing to the actual duties of the day. They are beginning to give up their ordinary avocations, and to make the public defence their dominant concern and their first business. Lee sees the gathering storm, and prudently draws back his lines. But he will have to strike quick, or not strike at all. It would be destruction to him to remain where he is after the body of the three millions of Pennsylvania had fairly gotten into a fighting temper.

Southern privations have been contrasted with Northern plenty, and been complacently dwelt upon as strong reasons for believing that the Southern rebels would flag in spirit and soon submit. These privations really justified only the contrary conclusion—that the rebels would maintain their contest with the utmost energy of human nature to the last extremity. While our comforts have been an anodyne, their miseries have been a constant stimulant. The war was daily and hourly brought home to them as a terrible business; and it kept every faculty and capacity of their nature on the strain. The very fact that the war entailed so much hardship upon them made them only the more impatient to drive it to its end as soon as possible. The common suffering only intensified the common sympathy, and fused all selfish feeling into the fiercest devotion to the common cause. This effect has been manifested in their army, as well as out of it. The London Times' correspondent, writing from Lee's army, narrates how that officer prides himself upon the superiority of his "poor ragamuffins" over the well-fed, well-clad National soldiers. It was really no matter for boasting, even were it founded on fact. The natural effect of all hardship is to fire the temper and steel the will, as well as to toughen the sinews.

The invasion of Lee, by bringing the war to our own threshhold, will do more to recall the public mind to some adequate sense of the supreme importance of the struggle, than aught else that could possibly have occurred. It will greatly promote a cheerful submission to the Conscription act; and will give Government the courage to make levies of a magnitude they otherwise would have hardly ventured even to think of. Lee hurls his mortal challenge into the very face of the North; and there is no alternative now, if we would escape destruction, but to fight him with our whole soul. War has got to become the first business of the North, as it has been from the beginning, the only business of the South. When it once comes to that—and we verily believe not until then—the fate of the rebellion will be sealed.

Thirty Regiments and a Naval Brigade.

The order of Gov. Seymour to have thirty regiments of militia immediately organized in New-York and Brooklyn is so much in accordance with the lessons of the hour and the wishes of the people, that no delay will occur in its execution. The regiments are to be drilled in artillery as well as infantry practice. They will be prepared to man the forts or meet an enemy in the field, as emergency may require.

The necessity of a reserve force, of sufficient numbers and discipline, to be held always in hand for the defence of New-York City and harbor, cannot now be disputed. We have just seen how a neighboring State, numbering three million souls, has been invaded, paralyzed by fear, and spoliated to the full extent of an enemy's desires, only because the reserved military strength had no organization and could not be placed in the enemy's front. The citizens of Pennsylvania who have fled from their homes at the approach of the rebel army are more than enough in number to have successfully opposed its advance. Their flight does not prove their poltroonery. It only proves that the State authorities have neglected to organize the citizens and prepare them for self-defence.

Pennsylvania has paid dearly enough for this neglect. The losses inflicted by the enemy can only be estimated by millions of dollars up to the present time. Before the end of the invasion they may amount to tens of millions more. It is too manifest that the only limit to the enemy's destructiveness is his caprice, or his notions of policy. But the losses that have fallen on Pennsylvania by reason of the rebel advance to the front of Harrisburgh, are but slight to what they would be if he were to capture and sack that city, or the much more important cities of Philadelphia or Pittsburgh. In cities, enormous aggregate capital is to be found, represented by houses, by merchandise, by machinery, by gold and silver, and vast accumulations of other personal property. Every county in a State is, through its citizens, more or less interested in the ownership of property in its cities. Neither this property nor the population—especially the women and children—is susceptible of removal in case of an enemy's approach; and the panic at such an approach is only less appalling than in an interior district, because there is not mixed with the fear of injury, any hope even of escape. A city without defences or defenders makes up its mind at once to succumb, and meets the approaching enemy afar off from its gates, with the white flag and a capitulation. And after capitulation, all property, all money, all lives in the city, are at the enemy's mercy, and he can force his own terms upon the people, be they never so hard. If Philadelphia should fall into the possession of Gen. Lee, he would not be likely to let it off for a levy of less than one hundred millions of dollars, to be taken in goods and money.

But it is needless to press such considerations on the public. The argument as applied to Philadelphia will apply with greater point and power to the city of New-York. The fall of this City would be worth to Gen. Lee the amount of the entire Confederate national debt up to the present time. The loss of this City to the United States would have no measure of value. It would be simply irreparable.

But it will not be lost—never. Rome alone, when less of a City than New-York, conquered the then known world. And we should not much doubt the result in pitting New-York City alone, at the present time, against the entire rebel Confederacy. What troops it could not furnish from its own citizens, its commerce and capital could procure; and in the end victory would side with the most opulent combatant.

The thirty regiments now about to be organized for home defence are but the nucleus of a defensive power that must become perfect and perpetual. The organization should be made so thorough that a signal should gather every man to his post within two hours from the time it is given.

In connection with these thirty regiments for fort and field service, there should be organized also a Naval Brigade, with equal discipline and mobility. In a small city, such as Portland, Maine, volunteer and impromptu action is possible, because leaders are few and well-known to the many. The achievement of the captors of the Caleb Cushing in Portland harbor is without its parallel in the war, as a spontaneous belligerent act of an unorganized people. But in New-York City such rapid evolvement of action out of surprise and lack of organization, would be impossible. It would require twenty-four hours for New-York to hear of the abduction of a vessel from its harbor.

With thirty regiments and a Naval Brigade thoroughly organized, and operated, if necessary, with such machinery of the Fire Alarm Telegraph, surprise or injury to this City from a public enemy would be impossible. And no heralded attack would ever be thought of. Let us have these defences, then, with all dispatch, and our community will be insured against all panics and all fears even; and through the steadiness and equanimity of the commercial and financial Metropolis, the nation itself will learn to be self-poised and strong.

The French in Mexico—Evacuation of the Capital.

We publish this morning important advices from the City of Mexico—by telegraph vid San Francisco—down to the 6th of June.

It appears that, for the present, the Mexican Government had been removed to San Luis Potosi, the capital of the State of San Luis Potosi, and situated 200 miles northwest of the City of Mexico. It is stated that the Mexican forces, numbering in the aggregate some 20,000 men, have evacuated the capital, with the intention of carrying on a guerrilla warfare.

To the well-wishers of the Mexicans and their cause, it is a source of disappointment to find that they did not make a decided stand in defence of their capital. But any effectual defence may have been impossible. It must be remembered that the great cry in Mexico has been for arms. They are poor in this article, and it has been a matter of wonder to those acquainted with the country how they obtained wherewith to make the long and desperate resistance at Puebla. The Mexicans manufacture no arms. The best, and probably nearly all the serviceable small arms and artillery they had were destroyed by Ortega in the capitulation of Puebla. Their ports are closed more effectually than those of the so-called Southern Confederacy, and the United States, the only country to which they can look for any of the means to sustain them in their struggle for liberty and independence, presents an unfriendly front and says emphatically, No! Our authorities have rigidly prevented the shipment of a single article needed by Mexico in her emergency, while French armed ships and transports have come into our ports, and with an eager and disgraceful compliance on the part of our authorities, these French ships have been permitted to load for Vera Cruz with transportation facilities, supplies and everything they needed in fact, to carry on the war against Mexico. If all this does not rise up in judgment against us some day we are greatly mistaken.

It is further stated in our advices that a portion of the French army occupied the main entrance to the City of Mexico on the 5th ult., and afforded the Church party protection against the excited populace. The Church party had given in its allegiance to the Emperor Napoleon, three papers had been established in the interest of the French, and this newly created Press had distinctly announced the determination to extirpate by root the democratic element, and that there need no longer be even a dream of popular sovereignty. Gen. Forey has issued a decree confiscating the property of all parties who have been or are in arms against the French, and the entire French army was expected to occupy the City of Mexico on the 8th June.

Thus another stage in the extraordinary drama that is being enacted in Mexico has been reached. Some of the actors are throwing off the mask, and the nature of the play which but a few divined when it commenced, is now known to the world at large. Who will rejoice and who will sorrow over the present aspect of affairs in Mexico? It is easily told. The bigoted priesthood and the Anti-Progressive, Anti-Democratic party in Europe will rejoice. The bigoted, retrogressive Church party in Mexico, with its gang of venal speculators, will rejoice, for at this moment they appear to triumph. These elements throughout Spanish America—and they are powerful still—will rejoice. The so-called Southern Confederacy will rejoice, for the Press of that section declares: "that while it is the interested policy of the North to favor the Mexicans, it is the solemn duty of the South to sustain the French in every way and to encourage them to perseverance, as the recognition of the Southern Confederacy depends entirely on the previous conquest and subjugation of Mexico by her invaders. On the ruins of that nation our nationality is to rise." And to our shame it must be said, we have an element in our midst that will rejoice at the prospect of France triumphant in Mexico, and Mexican subjugation. Certain Copperhead journals in the North will raise a shout of joy over a state of affairs that must cause sorrow to every true American who would preserve his nationality and constitutional Government, every lover of progress, freedom and justice, no matter to what nation or country he may belong.

But the end is not yet. All this rejoicing over French triumphs in Mexico may be too fast. Now it appears as though the French were having it all their own way, and the usual amount of denunciation and abuse will be heaped upon the unfortunate Mexicans. But the scene may change. The French will not find that they are reposing on a bed of roses in Mexico. The conquest of Mexico by France, and the restoration of the old retrogressive, bigoted Church party in that country, with the Barons, Almontes, Miramons, &c., will not be accomplished without a long and desperate struggle, and when this struggle is ended, it is not improbable that the friends of freedom and justice, in some other parts of the world, will have a word to say for the preservation of liberty and constitutional government on this continent, and the discomfiture of Napoleon.

The Opportunity of the Militia.

In these columns, last Saturday, we observed, that though the rebel Gen. Lee might advance with comparatively little fear of the bayonets in the hands of the raw militia suddenly called out to meet him—that though those bayonets might not be held so firmly as his own, and might give back as he advanced—this state of things could not exist long. After a while his advance must stop—after a while he must begin to fall back—and "woe to him when his retrograde begins!" for then the militia will show their courage.

This moment seems to be at hand sooner than we expected. The news yesterday indicates that already the enemy is drawing back his outposts. Harrisburgh is no longer threatened. The line of the Susquehanna is clear. York is evacuated, and Hanover Junction wrested from the enemy. Various accounts represent the rebel army to be falling back toward Chambersburgh. Its leaders may say they are merely concentrating to meet Gen. Meade in battle, and perhaps this may be the case. But the effect will be the same on the militia forces guarding Harrisburgh and the fords of the Susquehanna. They will think the enemy is retreating from them, and as they were diffident and distrustful before, their courage will mount high now; and whereas they would have defended timidly when the enemy advanced, they will attack with vehemence now when the enemy seems to fly.

This is the time, therefore, to converge upon and destroy Lee's army. Gen. Meade is across its path, whether it seeks Baltimore, Washington, or its way back to Virginia. Lee must fight the Army of the Potomac, whether he means to march South or stand still, and he seems to be gathering in his forces and turning his face to the South to meet the gage of battle.

This is the happy moment for Gen. Couch to move on his militia men—cautiously, but ever closely, on the heels of the retreating rebels. He must not wait till Meade fights, and wins or loses. Couch must hang on the loins of Lee's army—must take part in the fight from the moment the first gun sounds; and, in that event, the army of militiamen will prove as courageous in attack and as terrible in destructive energies as the steadiest veterans of our army in any of its former hours and occasions of victory.

The Canada Elections—New Phases in the British Provinces.

There is a political, commercial, as well as geographical, meaning in the elections just concluded in Canada, which it would be unwise to overlook. The contest is the most remarkable that has taken place since the year preceding the Canadian rebellion. The differences of the situation, however, are so marked as to supply a subject of contrast, rather than comparison. The Ministerial party have gained, apparently, a working majority in the Assembly. Out of the one hundred and thirty members constituting the Lower House of Parliament, they can safely reckon on having secured from sixty-eight to seventy thorough-paced followers. But the singular part of the story is, that out of this aggregate, the Ministers count no less than forty-four from Western Canada; leaving them in a Lower Canada minority so great as to threaten a revival of the worst sectional strife that has ever beset the Province.

To enable our readers to appreciate the position in its significance, so far as we ourselves are concerned, we will recapitulate, in brief, what we before pointed out as to the principles of the rival parties. The Ministry, remodeled into its present shape immediately before the elections took place, holds as its great distinctive policy that, so long as England professes to hold the colony as a dependency, she shall provide the biggest share of the burdens of defence; and that, while the province may coöperate to a limited extent in the arming of a local militia, such works as military highways, to connect the Provinces, are out of the question alike in a financial and political point of view. On this ground, the present ruling party in Canada, indeed, are at direct issue with the Imperial authorities. And it is mainly on this ground that their opponents, the Conservatives, have contested the field; and, as we see, have lost it by Upper Canada votes: the French element of the East showing a vast preponderance of support for the monarchical principle and the permanent connection with England.

The points of difference between the parties may be made still more appreciable by a reference to the pronounced opinions of two of the leading combatants. Mr. Drummond, for example, the radical Commissioner of Public Works, goes the length of saying, in opposition to his Imperial masters, that "the best armament for the Province is no armament at all." Mr. Thomas Darcy McGee, on the other hand, having deserted his former radical colleagues on the question of armament and inter-Colonial union, takes the high "Conservative" ground that Canada must have a Prince or King at the head of its Government. His words deserve notice in the United States, and we quote textually, so that no injustice shall be done to his meaning:

"The time seems to me to have come on this continent that the race has reached that point of experimental progress in politics when it would be wise and proper to establish our power under the immediate custody of a royal Prince. A vice-royalty, a dukedom, a principality, or a kingdom of Canada, would surely be as noble and important a heritage for one of the sons of Her Majesty, as the propped-up, treaty-made throne of Greece."

Mr. McGee, as preliminary to the realization of his ideal of a Government for Canada, looks to the arming and to the political union of all the provinces as the great immediate questions of party contest. And in this view, he has not only taken the backward track himself towards Conservatism or Colonial Toryism; but he has carried the entire Irish vote of his own section along with him.

Now, it is interesting to look at the geographical feature of this extraordinary contest. The Peninsular portion of the Province—all of it, in short, lying within the parallel of Portland, Maine; or, in other words, lying in the embrace of the United States—has gone, by overwhelming majorities, against the Imperial policy of expensive armaments and military highways. These majorities have declared Constitutionally what the Commissioner of Public Works declared semi-officially—that "the best armament for the country is no armament at all." Lower Canada, on the other hand—including the great commercial metropolis of British America, Montreal—has given a sectional majority of almost two to one in support of the Conservative theories of Mr. McGee.

This geographical division of parties has also important commercial features belonging to it. The peninsular country of the Upper Province, which is hugged so closely in the protruded arms of New-York and Michigan, is the country which first clamored for Reciprocity of Trade with the States—which has opposed all the differential tariffs diverting the import trade of the country to the St. Lawrence—which prefers, when the Customs tax will permit it, to do its business in New-York, to being compelled by sectional legislation to do its business in Montreal—and which, last of all, spurns with absolute contempt the policy of being taxed to make Halifax a great Winter port for the whole country, in preference to Portland or any other accessible American port.

Minor issues, of course, as in all public elections, have been introduced into this contest. But the principles which lay at the bottom of the whole, were those we have pointed out; and they surely deserve notice at the hands of those who care to look even but a short way into the future. In the first instance, the radical, or anti-war Ministry of Canada will be sustained. For the West has given them votes enough to elect their Speaker. But after that is over they will have to contend against more than mere Assembly majorities. They will find Imperial influence and Imperial money employed against them, and their being compelled to rule Lower Canada by an Upper Canada majority, will still further aggravate the difficulty of their position and prolong the conflict.

Richmond.—The presumption from an article which we find in a late number of the Richmond Sentinel is that there is but a small rebel force garrisoning Richmond. It was reported that our troops had advanced as far as the White House, which seems to have thrown Richmond into quite a panic, and the people were appealed to by the authorities and the press to arm themselves instantly for self-defence. The Sentinel says that "instead of being ready for our work, we (the rebels) are now to present the spectacle of an excited mob meeting to organize when the enemy is at our doors;" and further, that "in the public meeting held the previous night, what looked most like work was a company of grey-headed men, and another of little boys, who were organized and drilling," though it is claimed there are thousands of able-bodied men in Richmond who will not enlist until compelled by the strong arm of the law.

While in this state of perturbation, the Richmond rebels learned that our forces were not at White House, and congratulated themselves that they thus had some time to prepare for us. Their first news, however, was the truth; for on the 25th our troops were at the White House, which is menacingly near to the rebel Capital. The rebels had strongly fortified this position, which is really quite an important one, but Gen. Dix moved upon it rapidly, and the small rebel garrison had only time to run. Perhaps a rapid advance upon Richmond now would secure its capture. Some people are arguing that Richmond is of no value to us—but politically and militarily both, it is of great value.

Cool and Considerate.—Now that the rebel army is imminently menacing Washington, it is exhilarating to learn, as we do by a special dispatch from there, that the "enrollment under the Conscription act is rapidly progressing." It is four months since the Conscription act became law, and if an enrollment of the citizens of Washington is actually being made thus early, we certainly have some reason to hope it will be completed before the end of the year, and the conscription enforced by the close of the present Presidency, or some time after.

There is cheer also in the statement, that "it is believed the militia of the District of Columbia will be called out." It is to be hoped this will not be done with any undue haste. "Festina lente" is an excellent motto for Washington, even when the rebels are within sight of it. While the subject is being pondered, the citizens will doubtless console themselves by a calm perusal of our dispatch which asserts that Lee's army is trying to make headway in a southeast direction from Hagerstown.

The Right Spirit.—Four Pennsylvania regiments, the One Hundred and Fifty-eighth, One Hundred and Sixty-eighth, One Hundred and Seventy-first, and One Hundred and Seventy-fifth, and three Massachusetts regiments, the Eighth, Forty-sixth, and Fifty-first, whose time is about expiring, have tendered their services for the defence of Pennsylvania, as long as there is an armed rebel north of the Potomac. Their services have been accepted. Returning regiments, that are receiving ovations occasionally in this State and in New-Jersey, would render themselves doubly sure of the gratitude of their country if they would follow this example. They are experienced in the field, and capable of instant service. Volunteers are not.

The Ranking General.—We are cheered to learn that the dispute which has been raging between three of our Major-Generals not in active service, as to which ranked the others, has been settled. Gen. McClellan takes the honor, and Gens. Fremont and Butler, who had each furnished elaborate arguments why he should be counted chief in the synagogue, must take back seats. While the public are perturbed concerning the fate of Washington, it is well to give it relief on questions like this.

The Fort Ganesvoort Property.—The long pending legal controversy in relation to the plot of ground known as the Ganesvoort property, is at last finally determined. The General Term of the Supreme Court, in an elaborate opinion, consider all the questions at issue, and decide that the Comptroller has no alternative but to sign the bonds and take possession of the property. This plot embraces about 130 lots of land near the foot of Fourteenth-street, North River, with a water front of 900 feet. The land is set apart for a market, the design being to remove the Washington Market to this central point, so as to more fully accommodate the upper section of the City. We hope now that the legal obstacles are removed, that no time will be lost in establishing this market so much needed by the public.

Sec. 6. After the passage of this ordinance, no slave in this State shall be subject to State, county or municipal taxes.

Gov. Gamble announced the withdrawal of his resignation. He will, therefore, continue to serve as Governor until the election of his successor, on the 18th of August, 1864.

The Convention then adjourned sine die.

Maine Union State Convention.

Bangor, Me., Wednesday, July 1.

The Union State Convention assembled in Norombega Hall, this morning. The gathering was the largest of the kind ever assembled in these parts. Quite a number of Democrats were present.

The hall was crowded to overflowing long before the Convention was called to order.

At 11 A. M. the Convention was called to order by Hon. James G. Blaine, of Augusta, Chairman of the State Committee.

Hon. James L. McCobb was appointed temporary Chairman, and Charles A. Miller, of Rockland, and J. D. Pulsifer, of Auburn, temporary Secretaries.

A Committee on Credentials was appointed composed of one from each county.

While the Committee were out, Mr. Lewis Barker, of Stetson, was loudly called for and made a speech.

John T. Gilman, of the Portland Press, was then called for, and he also addressed the Convention.

The Convention then adjourned till two P. M., after agreeing to proceed upon reassembling to ballot for a candidate for Governor.

At two P. M. the Convention reassembled.

The Committee on Credentials reported that the whole number of towns represented was 298, and the whole number of delegates present 1,274.

The Committee on Permanent Organization reported Hon. James L. McCobb for permanent President, and a long list of Vice Presidents, with Charles A. Miller, of Rockland, and J. D. Pulsifer, of Auburn, for Secretaries.

Samuel Cony was nominated for Governor by a large vote.

The Committee on Resolutions reported as follows:

Resolved, That in this critical and momentous period of the country's history, it is the solemn duty of all loyal and patriotic citizens to take a firm stand in favor of the National Administration in conducting the war against the rebellion, and vindicating the authority of the Union throughout its entire domain.

Resolved, That in sustaining the National authorities in this war for the salvation of the Union and the rights of man, we make no disorganizing opposition to the policy and the measures of the Government; but unite as one man in sustaining its civil and military policy and measures without qualification or reservation; and upon this issue there can be but two parties—patriots in favor and traitors opposed.

Resolved, That those assemblages of Northern citizens who, wishing to make a division in favor of rebellion, have feigned excessive indignation at the few arrests of persons engaged in discouraging the organization of a military force to defend the Constitution, while they have expressed no executations against the foe now invading the Free States, and no commiseration for our fellow-citizens, who have been robbed of their property and driven from their homes by a band of lawless conspirators against the Republic, have shown such misdirected sympathies and such utter lack of the first instincts of patriotism, as to make them dangerous counselors in the present crisis of the country.

Resolved, That Hon. Hannibal Hamlin, Vice-President of the United States, and our two Senators in Congress, be requested to repair to Washington immediately for the purpose of urging upon the President the importance and necessity of placing along the coast a sufficient naval and military force to protect the commerce of the country from the piratical depredations of the rebels, and to have the same accomplished in such manner as shall be the most efficient and expeditious.

The resolutions were unanimously adopted.

Resolutions were also passed complimenting our gallant army and navy.

The Convention was exceedingly large and enthusiastic, and the best feeling prevailed.

Local agents and subscribers will have the same facilities extended to them as heretofore in the remittance of bank notes or drafts for the loan, and larger sales are anticipated than have yet been reported.

DISPATCH TO THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Washington, Wednesday, July 1.

THE QUESTION OF RANK SETTLED.

The question of rank between the Major-Generals of the army has been decided by the Board of Officers to which it has been submitted, by determining the following order of precedence:

Major-Gen. McClellan, appointed May 14, 1861, to take rank from the same date.

Maj.-Gen. Fremont, appointed July 1, to rank from May 14, 1861.

Maj.-Gen. Banks, appointed June 5, to take rank from May 16, 1861.

Maj.-Gen. Dix, appointed June 14, to take rank from May 16, 1861.

Maj.-Gen. Butler, appointed May 16, to take rank from May 16, 1861.

The decision is upon two grounds:

First—That an appointment may be antedated by the President, as in Gen. Fremont's case; and,

Second—That the order in which the names stood in the list when the appointments were sent into the Senate, determines the rank between Gens. Banks, Dix and Butler, without regard to the actual date of appointment by the President.

The Late Col. M. K. Bryan, of Albany, One Hundred and Seventy-fifth Regiment New-York Volunteers.

The death of Col. M. K. Bryan, of the One Hundred and Seventy-fifth regiment of New-York Volunteers, at the action before Port Hudson, has been announced. His remains are daily expected here from New-Orleans, en route for Albany.

At the outbreak of the rebellion, Col. Bryan was in command of the Twenty-fifth N. Y. S. M., Albany, and was among the first in the United States service, the Twenty-fifth being the third regiment from this State under the first call for 75,000 men. He recruited his regiment to the full number, and was in New-York in two days after he received orders, and on the fifth day was en route for Alexandria. The full term of the regiment was spent in that vicinity, and during it, Fort Albany, acknowledged to be one of the finest defences of Washington, was constructed. On a subsequent call the Twenty-fifth regiment and its gallant commander were again promptly in the field, and forward to their old quarters. On their final return, Col. Bryan devoted himself to the organization of the One Hundred and Seventy-fifth regiment. Aided by the energy of his officers and his own popularity, he soon had the requisite number of men, and with orders for New-Orleans he was, for the third time, at the head of a fine command, and soon in active service.

At the action at Port Hudson, in which he was killed, Col. Bryan exhibited dauntless bravery; always at the post of gallantry and danger, he set an example which his brave men enthusiastically emulated. He fell in the prime of life and the midst of usefulness for a cause he devotedly loved. A noble-hearted, intelligent man, a valuable and accomplished officer, he offered himself to his country, with the premonition that he was giving his life. It is well that the authorities and citizens of Albany should, as they design to, pay all honor to the memory of the gallant Bryan.

The officers and members of the One Hundred and Seventy-fifth—the friends of the deceased in this City—will need no other suggestion than that contained in the following call for befitting action when the remains reach here:

"All officers of the One Hundred and Seventy-fifth regiment, at present in this City, as well as the friends of the late Col. M. K. Bryan, who fell while nobly leading his regiment in the late attack on Port Hudson, are requested to meet at the Park Hotel, on Thursday, July 2, at 3 o'clock P. M., to make preparations for the reception of his remains."

Gen. Early a Northern Traitor.

New-York, Tuesday, June 30, 1863.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Gen. Early, who is at the head of one of the divisions of Lee's army, and who recently made the trifling demand of money and supplies from the town of York, Penn., is a native of that State. He was born in Carlisle. His father was a poor shoemaker, who lived in the outskirts of the then village, and brought his only other son up to his trade. This one, the General, left home at an early age, made his way to Lynchburgh, Va., established himself there as a dentist, was successful, married a wealthy girl, and soon became one of the F. F. V's. He is familiar with the Cumberland Valley, and no doubt aided in perfecting Lee's plan of invasion. He is a man of no education whatever, but wealth and his apostacy were sufficient grounds to elevate him to the position he now occupies. DICKINSON.

The Franking Privilege.

We are requested to call special attention to the following change of the law in relation to the franking privilege:

Hereafter, all correspondence addressed to any Executive Department of the Government, or any officer in it, must be prepaid, except official communications written by some officer of the department, or an officer under its control or responsible to it; and in such cases, under the words "official business," on the envelope, the officer must sign his name, with his official designation. All other persons, and all officers writing to departments with which they are not connected, must prepay their postage. All communications to the President, not written by a public officer, and all to the Vice-President, must be prepaid.

All communications addressed to Postmasters must be prepaid, and if a reply is required, stamps for return postage must be inclosed.

The observance of this regulation will save much disappointment and expense.

Personal.

Gen. Meade, the new leader of the Army of the Potomac, is the grandson of George Meade, of Philadelphia, an eminent Irish-American merchant, whose firm (Meade & Fitzsimmons) contributed in 1781 $10,000 to a fund for the relief of the famishing army of Gen. Washington.

It is exceedingly effective in eradicating mercury from the system, eruptive diseases, erysipelas and scrofula. Messrs. DEAFNESS
NOISES IN THE HEAD,
Diseases of the Eye, Ear & Throat,
CATARRH CURED
BY
DR. VON EISENBERG.
Author of "Surgical and Practical Observations on the Diseases of the Ear, with his new Mode of Treatment."

NEW TESTIMONY.

"New-York, May 6.

I was entirely deaf in my left ear, accompanied by a discharge. I placed myself under Dr. Von Eisenberg's care, who, by his great skill, restored me to perfect hearing, in the short space of a few minutes, without giving me the slightest pain, and the discharge has ceased entirely. The Eustachian Tube, which was obliterated, is quite open, and I feel that the air-passage performs its functions. I am amply satisfied, and recommend every one suffering from impaired hearing to place themselves under the treatment of this eminent and successful physician.

THOMAS GRANAN, No. 539 6th-av."

"New-York, May 7, 1863.

I have great pleasure to testify to the skill of Dr. Von Eisenberg. I went into his office almost completely deaf, and came out with my perfect hearing. It is nearly twelve months since, and the hearing is perfect. The operation, which lasted two or three minutes in each of my ears, gave me no pain whatsoever. I, with confidence, recommend all sufferers to place themselves under Dr. Von Eisenberg's unsurpassing skill.

SAMUEL C. HUNT,
No. 6 Mascrole-av., Greenpoint, L. I."

No. 136 Madison-st., New-York, Feb. 9, 1863.

I have been completely deaf in one ear, and partially so in the other, for above seventeen years, with a disagreeable discharge from both ears, combined with continual rumbling noise in the head, for which I have been treated by a most eminent practitioner in the City without the slightest relief.

I consulted Dr. Von Eisenberg, but I must candidly say that I had no faith in his success when I did so. It is, therefore, due to Dr. Von Eisenberg to acknowledge that I am entirely cured; also, that he displayed that skill and knowledge which have procured for him such an unrivaled reputation. As I have had an opportunity of comparing his mode of treatment with that of others, I can truly state that it is not only superior, but the principles which direct his mode of restoring the hearing are, in my opinion, certain. JOHN TAYLOR,

New-York, July 19, 1862.

This certifies that my mother has been for some time afflicted with partial deafness, suffering from pain, and rumbling noises in the head, together with other indications of a total loss of hearing. Dr. Von Eisenberg removed from her ears a great quantity of matter, together with coagulated blood, relieving her instantaneously, and all without pain. It is with grateful thanks that I give this testimony to his skill.

CARROLL J. POST, No. 28 South-st.

SIGHT RESTORED.

June 25, 1863.

My daughter brought me to Dr. Von Eisenberg almost completely blind in both eyes. I could not bear the pain nor the light. I am completely cured by Dr. Von Eisenberg, and called now to express my gratitude to the Doctor for his skill and unremitting attention, by which I recovered one of the most precious senses to me after being deprived of it for four years. It is only due to Dr. Von Eisenberg to state that I have tried several physicians in vain. I shall be happy to bear personal testimony to Dr. Von Eisenberg's unrivaled success to any lady or gentleman who will call on me.

"This is to certify, that I have suffered from very severe CHRONIC CATARRH, with a dull heaviness in the head. I felt my nose completely stopped up accompanied by continual soreness of the throat, the chills stealing over me with occasional hot flushes, a great tightness of the chest and pain, so much so, that every one thought it was consumption. Having heard of the great cures performed by Dr. Von Eisenberg, I consulted him with but little hope of a cure. I am now happy to be enabled to add my testimonial to the great number already in the Doctor's possession, as to his scientific and successful mode of treatment, as he has shown in my case that skill and knowledge which have procured for him so great a reputation. I am so entirely restored to perfect health that I do most sincerely recommend all sufferers from CHRONIC CATARRH and SORE THROAT to apply at once to Dr. Von Eisenberg with a certainty of being cured."

UNITED STATES TREASURY,
NEW-YORK, June 29, 1863.

BY AUTHORITY OF THE SECRETARY of the Treasury, I hereby give notice that I will, until the 31st day of July, inclusive, receive subscriptions at par for United States Bonds of the loan of 1862, bearing six (6) per cent. interest in gold coin, commonly known as Five-Twenties.

LAKE ERIE AND PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY.
FIRST MORTGAGE SINKING FUND BONDS.

The Lake Erie and Pacific Railroad Company, in the State of Indiana, now offer for sale their entire issue of $920,000 First, and only, Mortgage Bonds, bearing seven per cent. interest, payable semi-annually in the City of New-York.

These bonds are secured by a DEED OF TRUST, constituting the FIRST and ONLY lien upon the entire Road, its franchises, appurtenances, rolling stock, &c.

Its route is along the White Water Valley, from Rushville to Union, a distance of about sixty miles, and passes through the richest, best cultivated and most densely populated portion of the State of Indiana.

The road is the CENTRAL SECTION of the otherwise completed TRUNK LINE, connecting the great Southwest at LOUISVILLE, Ky., on the Ohio River, and at an early day with TOLEDO and SANDUSKY, on Lake Erie.

The Company is wholly without debt (except its bonded debt) and being strong in its local traffic, and connecting with roads that must necessarily largely increase the volume of its revenues, the BOARD OF DIRECTORS, with great confidence, invite the attention of capitalists to these securities, believing that they offer an opportunity for a first-class railroad investment, than which, in their judgment, there is no better to be had.

The published exhibits of the Company, together with a map showing the locality and advantages of the Road, can be had from either of the Trustees of the Deed of Trust, in this City, named below, and from either whom the bonds are only to be had.

PRIVATE CONSULTATION.—DR. HUNTER has for thirty years confined his attention to diseases of a certain class, in which he has treated no less than fifty thousand cases without an instance of failure. His great remedy, HUNTER'S RED DROP, cures certain diseases when regular treatment and all other remedies fail; cures without dieting or restriction in the habits of the patient; cures without the disgusting and sickening effects of all other remedies; cures in new cases in less than six hours; cures the dreadful consequent effects of mercury, but possesses the peculiarly valuable property of annihilating the rank and poisonous taint that the blood is sure to absorb unless his remedy is used. That is what he claims for it, and what no other will accomplish. Its value in this respect has become so well known, that scientific men in every department of medical knowledge begin to appreciate it, for hardly a week passes that he is not consulted by druggists, chemists and physicians in regard to some pitiful patient who has exhausted the whole field of the faculty, and still the disease will appear. Its popularity is so great that there is not a quack doctor in the City that has not attacked it, and when they find their lies are not so easily swallowed, they then pretend that they can make it. It is $1 a vial, and cannot be obtained genuine anywhere but at the old office, No. 3 Division-st. Book for 15 three-cent stamps, 300 pages, 100 colored illustrations. The best work out.

HIGHLY IMPORTANT.

A HEAVY BATTLE IN PENNSYLVANIA.

The First and Eleventh Corps Engaged with Longstreet and Hill.

Gens. Meade and Reynolds in Command of Our Forces.

No Decisive Result at Last Accounts.

OUR TROOPS BEING REINFORCED.

DEATH OF GEN. REYNOLDS

The Locality of the Battle Near Gettysburgh.

NEAR GETTYSBURGH, Penn., Wednesday, July 1.

A heavy engagement has been going on since 9 o'clock this A. M., between the rebel forces of LONGSTREET and HILL and the First and Eleventh corps, under Gens. REYNOLDS and MEADE.

The locality of the fight is beyond Gettysburgh, on the Chambersburgh Pike.

Portions of the fight have been very severe, and attended with heavy loss.

Thus far the onset of the enemy has been successfully resisted by the two corps mentioned, and the Third and Twelfth are now coming up.

I regret to say that Major-Gen. REYNOLDS was mortally wounded, and has since died.

NEWS FROM THE SOUTH.

Rebel Speculations on Military Movements—The Spoils at Winchester—Gen. Ewell's Congratulatory Order—Latest News from Vicksburgh, &c.

From the Richmond Inquirer, June 26.

People in civil life cannot pretend to criticise, in its present stage, a grand campaign, such as that now entered upon by our Army of Northern Virginia. We do not so much as know its object, and therefore stillless can we pronounce on the suitableness of the means. Some of the Confederate newspapers write as if they had expected the cavalry advance into Pennsylvania to have been at once let loose upon a general plundering expedition. But independently of the fact that nothing disorganizes troops and renders them useless like indiscriminate plunder, it is well to recollect that it may be absolutely necessary to the general plan to keep that cavalry force well in hand, so as to cover other movements of the main body. On the great chess-board of war there is a mighty game in progress; and neither we at home, nor HOOKER, the opposite player himself, has yet divined the nature of Gen. LEE's combinations. It is true that Confederates owe no consideration or forbearance to their enemies. It is true, further, that our Generals owe it to their own people to visit a terrible devastation and havoc upon the enemy's country, whenever they have the means in their hands to do so effectually, and on a grand scale. But this is not yet the case. Gen. HOOKER, with a vast army, is still to be disposed of, and every movement of each command must, doubtless, be calculated with a view to this needful preliminary business. It may be needful even to deceive the enemy as to the ultimate object of the Confederate General, by adopting the very course complained of—that is, forbearing from plunder now, on the very threshold of the expedition. In order to do the business well and thoroughly the just retaliation (which we demand and the foe expects) must be organized and regulated as deliberately as any other military movement, and it might be fatal to the whole campaign if JENKINS' cavalry were now permitted to load themselves with plunder, and so, for the sake of the paltry booty of Chambersburgh, miss perhaps the splendid prize of Philadelphia or the crushing blow at the enemy's head in Washington.

These are some of the considerations which should make us all take patiently for the present the well-pleased announcements made in Yankee papers about private property being hitherto respected, and payment made in Confederate bills. Certainly, if the expedition of Gen. LEE were to end so—if, at the very moment when hordes of Yankee brigands are burning and plundering far and wide over our country, not only stealing all they can lay their hands upon, but letting loose bands of negroes with bayonets in one hand and torches in the other, to the work of indiscriminate outrage and devastation, our army in Pennsylvania were to march through the country just as if it were our own, asking permission of Dutch farmers to draw water at their wells, pressing their custom on the smiling storekeepers, and paying them in the best and only kind of money we ever see at home; and should return so, amid the compliments of the Pennsylvanians, and their heartily expressed wishes soon to see again among them such bounteous and liberal gentlemen—in that unheard of and unsupposable case, the whole world would laugh us to scorn; it would be said to amount indeed to an admission that we do indeed feel ourselves to be in unjustifiable rebellion, and have no right to presume to deal with our enemies as they may deal with us. It would be giving up the cause; formally surrendering our people throughout every State to pillage and oppression; inviting a continuance and aggravation of all the evils of invasion, and virtually offering the necks of our ringleaders to the hangman.

This is so horrible to think of that we may safely conclude it is not the intention of the great chieftain to whom so mighty a task has been intrusted by the President, and who has up to this day discharged his task so nobly. His operations for the present we take to be wholly strategical. He may purposely forbear to alarm the hostile populations, and give them warning to run off their herds and flocks, so as to leave the country waste before him, until, HOOKER once well cleared out of his path, he can throw the whole Confederate army in Pennsylvania, wide-winged, far stretching, in one vast combined movement, enveloping Washington on the one side, Harrisburgh on the other, and so forward, forward, till our red battle flag reflects itself in the Delaware.

THE FRIGHT IN RICHMOND.

From the Sentinel, of the 25th.

LINCOLN seems, indeed, in earnest about giving us another view of his banners from the hills of Richmond—a great deal more earnest, we are sorry to say, than are those who have had in hand the management of the organization of our citizens to assist in home defence. Now that the enemy are unquestionably landing in considerable force both at Brandon, on the James, and at the White House, on the Pamunkey, there is that commotion among us which is due to the circumstances. Instead of being ready for our work—every man knowing his Captain and his rally-point and signal—we are now to present the spectacle of an excited mob, meeting to organize when the enemy is at our doors. A great responsibility rests upon those who have been assigned the duty of organizing the people, and accepted the call, but have totally neglected their business. What excuse they may offer boots not now. They, at least, cannot say that they have not been reminded of their remissness.

Nothing remains now but to make the best of things as they are, and to organize without another day's delay. Let live men be appointed to the management. The homes and the property of this people are at stake, and it is every man's business, and every man's duty to himself to defend them. If we present the front that we ought to do, we shall deter attack. If we organize slowly and imperfectly, we shall have a fight and doubtless a victory, but we will have to pay the sad price. If we neglect our duty, we may expect the fate which we shall richly deserve!

We see some frivolous complainings because the guns which are to be put into our hands are not in all cases fancy pieces. This is no time for such nonsense. They are infinitely better guns than many of those with which our brave soldiers won the early victories of the war. They are excellent guns, good for a bunker at every pull of the trigger, if only there be a brave man to hold and aim them. They are guns that our brothers and sons have borne, and are bearing, during many a long and weary march; surely the most infirm or effeminate among us can carry them to our city fortifications, where alone they would be expected to use them. Let us, for decency's sake, hear nothing more about heavy guns. There are men whom you cannot suit with a gun, because they do not want any gun. But a brave man who wants, to help to defend his home and capital, will thankfully receive whatever the Government gives him, knowing that it will give him the best it can.

P. S.—After the above was in type, it was ascertained that the news accepted as true all day yesterday, that the enemy had landed at the White House, was without foundation. It was understood that the tidings came through one of the army scouts. If so, we hope Gen. ELZEY will put him in the guard-house. It is essential in times like these that we have accurate information.

Officers of the detective police, who were at West Point yesterday at 11 o'clock, and at the White House in the evening at 4 o'clock, state that there was no enemy and no signs at either point, at the hours named. A telegraph from the White House, still later, says none are there, but mentions a report that they are at West Point.

The fact that we thus have longer time to prepare than we expected, will not, we hope, throw us back into lethargy. Let Government take efficient steps to enroll and officer, and force out, if necessary, every one who ought to be in the Home Guard. In the public meeting held in the Square last evening, we are told that what most looked like work of anything seen, was a company of gray-headed men and another of little boys, who were organized and drilling. There are thousands of able-bodied men who will not be induced to do their duty, except by compulsion. They are in gambling-rooms or other places of vice, at the very time that the Governor may be addressing a crowd in the public square, or the city bells may ring the approach of the enemy. Moral appeals never reach them. The strong arm of the law must take hold.

The following paragraph we find in the local columns of the Sentinel:

The Militia responded in great numbers to the Governor's proclamation yesterday afternoon. The vast crowd assembled in front of the Eastern entrance of the Capitol, and were addressed by Gov. LETCHER, who stated the causes which had influenced him to make this appeal to the citizens, and he was satisfied that it had not been made in vain. He told them that if it became necessary to go out to defend the city, he would go with them, and, if need be, surrender his life before the Capitol should be given up to the foe. He was repeatedly cheered during the progress of his remarks. The Governor was followed by Jos. MAYO, Esq., Mayor of the city, in an effective speech. It is presumed that immediate steps will be taken for the organization of a force for the defence of the city.

THE CAPTURED AT WINCHESTER.

EXPLOITS OF MOSBY'S CAVALRY.

From the Richmond Enquirer, June 26.

We are in possession of some facts obtained from a private letter of a late date to a gentleman in Richmond, relative to the operations of our advancing army.

We surprised MILROY, and captured nearly his entire force, only excepting those who availed themselves of the example set by their commander, of an ignominious desertion of their comrades in battle.

We captured 4,700 men, 109 officers, 30 cannons, 250 wagons, 400 horses, 30 ambulances, and all the public and private baggage, sutlers' goods, &c. Not a wheel escaped. Our men deserve all our country can award them.

The people say that MILROY went off in civilian's clothes; he left Winchester the evening before the assault. He who does that as a commander will do anything disgraceful.

The Yankees are in a terrible state of commotion; they cannot imagine what the rebels are about. STUART has whipped their cavalry every day, and sometimes twice a day, ever since he left Culpepper. He has captured five or six hundred prisoners. Mosby caught HOOKER's Aid, with letters of instruction to their cavalry commander. These showed that HOOKER was very much puzzled. There has been millions of dollars worth of damage at Cumberland, Md. He has destroyed all the workshops and machinery, locomotives, cars, &c., there. Every bridge from the Little Capon River, for some distance west of Cumberland, is completely destroyed. The immense tunnel is destroyed, and the "great iron bridge" knocked all to pieces; eleven shots from a 13-inch rifled gun brought the whole structure—four hundred feet of magnificence—into the water. This is one of the worst blows we have lately given them.

Maj. WHITE has broken the railroad between Harper's Ferry and the Point of Rocks. He burned one wagon train, but did not get the horses.

MILROY is on the Maryland Heights; he has no communication with any one, and it is probable no one is desirous of having any with him.

Our destruction of railroad property rather outdoes the grand Stoneman raid, and the small work of damage on the Central Railroad.

A report reached the city by the Fredericksburgh train last evening to the effect that a raid was anticipated at Gordonsville, although nothing was said of such a movement by the passengers direct from Gordonsville on the Central. Possibly some of the citizens may apprehend some such dash on the part of the enemy; but we are quite sure that their fears will never be realized.

No reports, for a wonder, reached us from Winchester, and the public may congratulate itself that through the usual channels (passengers) there were none. The seat of war is now removed some 200 miles or more beyond the Capital, and a "passenger report" traveling that distance would not be likely to contain much of its pristine simplicity and truth.

RETURNING THANKS.

HEADQUARTERS, SECOND CORPS, June 13, 1863.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 44.—The Lieutenant-General commanding asks the men and officers of the corps to unite with him in returning thanks to our Heavenly Father for the signal success with which he has crowned the valor of this command.

In acknowledgment of divine favor, Chaplains will hold religious services in their respective regiments at such times as may be most convenient. With wonderfully small loss—less than three hundred killed, wounded and missing—we have carried strong works, defended by an abundance of superior artillery, capturing over three thousand prisoners and large quantities of military stores and supplies. Such a result should strengthen the reliance in the righteousness of our cause, which has inspired every effort of our troops. By command of

Lieut.-Gen. R. S. EWELL.

MR. VALLANDIGHAM.

From the Richmond Examiner, June 24.

Mr. VALLANDIGHAM is no longer in the Confederacy. He has sailed from Wilmington, and so many days ago that ere this he is either safe on British soil or deck, or captured again by his admirers at Washington.

Mr. VALLANDIGHAM, when thrust into our lines, presented himself as a prisoner to our authorities, and was so held while in our limits. He requested an exit from one of our ports, and it was accorded him.

We are very glad, indeed, that the matter was managed as it was, and has terminated as it has done. It is just what we suggested as the best for all the parties concerned, and most likely to frustrate LINCOLN's amiable designs.

We probably shall soon hear of VALLANDIGHAM in Canada, and next of his crossing the line in great triumph as Governor of Ohio."

IMPORTANT FROM MEXICO

Evacuation of the City of Mexico by the Mexicans.

The Church Party Offer their Allegiance to the Emperor Napoleon.

The Whole French Army to Occupy the Capital.

Newspapers Established Favoring the French Policy.

The Democratic Element and Popular Sovereignty to be Extirpated.

Confiscation of Property by Gen. Forey.

SAN FRANCISCO, Tuesday, June 30.

Dates from the City of Mexico from the 30th of May to the 6th of June are received. The news is of the highest importance.

President JUAREZ and his Cabinet had concluded to evacuate the City of Mexico, believing that the most effectual resistance to the French army could be made outside of the walls.

On the 21st of May the Government moved to San Luis de Potosi, taking all the movable firearms and munitions of war along.

They also took with them two millions of dollars from the Treasury.

The force that garrisoned the City of Mexico, said to number over 20,000 men, was withdrawn to the Cuernevoca Plaza, and to intermediate points around the city, for the purpose of carrying on guerrilla warfare.

On June 1, a meeting was held in the city, at which the principal leaders of the Church party were present. They sent a commission to Gen. FOREY to offer their allegiance to the Emperor LOUIS NAPOLEON.

On June 5, the French division, under Gen. BAZAINE, occupied the main entrance to the city, and afforded the Church party protection against the excited populace.

The whole French army was expected to occupy the Capital on the 8th of June.

Three newspapers had been established favoring the policy of the French.

One of these papers states that the occupation of the City of Mexico settles with absolute certainty, that it is necessary to extirpate by root the democratic element, and no longer need there be even a dream of popular sovereignty.

Gen. FOREY had issued a decree confiscating the property of all parties who have been or are in arms against the French.

This news is derived from letters received here from high Mexican officials.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

LOCAL MILITARY MATTERS.

The Organization of Thirty Regiments in New-York and Brooklyn.

The announcement, which appeared in the columns of the TIMES yesterday, that Gov. SEYMOUR had ordered Inspector-General MILLER to come to New-York immediately and commence the organization of thirty regiments here and in Brooklyn, gave an impetus to the military feeling. On making inquiry at the proper quarter, we find that no decided action in the matter has yet taken place, but that it is under consideration.

The militia to be raised will be for the defence of the State and the harbor, and for the purpose of repelling any invasion of the States adjoining New-York.

Hon. Mayor OPDYKE and the Committee of the Common Council on National Affairs are the moving instruments in this matter. The Mayor wrote to Gov. SEYMOUR stating that the invasion of Pennsylvania and Maryland should act as a warning to the State of New-York, and that they should be prepared for any emergency. Major-Gen. SANDFORD was consulted and highly approved of the plan; and the City Government have offered to assist in every way it can in raising and equipping such a force.

The Councilmanic Committee having signed the letter to the Governor, it was intrusted to Alderman FARLEY, Chairman of the Committee on National Affairs, who forwarded the letter to Gov. SEYMOUR. The Mayor also telegraphed to Albany as follows:

MAYOR'S OFFICE, NEW-YORK, June 30, 1863.

His Excellency Horatio Seymour, Governor:

SIR: The militia force of this City must be strengthened. Will you authorize Gen. SANDFORD to organize from twenty to thirty regiments forthwith?

If you have no means of arming and equipping them, the City Government will, no doubt, make adequate provision. I urge this as a matter of absolute necessity.

GEORGE OPDYKE, Mayor.

Last evening the following answer was received:

ALBANY, June 30, 1863.

To Hon. George Opdyke, Mayor of New-York, No. 79 Fifth-avenue:

I have taken steps to raise thirty (30) regiments in New-York and Brooklyn. The Inspector-General will see you to-morrow. HORATIO SEYMOUR.

The Inspector-General is expected in this City to-day, when it is thought the arrangements will be immediately made for enlisting and preparing the force for service.

THE SEVENTY-FIRST REGIMENT.

A letter has been received from a non-commissioned officer of this regiment, now at Harrisburgh, from which the following interesting extract is taken:

HARRISBURGH, Monday, June 29, 1863.

Yesterday morning this regiment was moved about one-quarter of a mile forward in line of battle, to repel a charge of rebel cavalry. They did not charge, but fired three shells—6 to 12-pounders. I should think—and that was the last of it. No one hurt on our side. We were then drawn back to within about half a mile of the fortifications, where we are now, after being in the extreme front, under arms, twelve days and nights, traveling 120 miles, of which we marched fifty or sixty, with the enemy close upon us the greater part of the time. The left wing of the regiment was again ordered on picket duty last (Sunday) night. This I call "pretty severe."

RETURN OF THE TWENTY-FIFTH MAINE REGIMENT.

This fine regiment arrived at the Battery yesterday morning from Harper's Ferry, on its way home, under command of Col. WILLIAM WIRT VIRGIN. Its numbers have been thinned by the loss of about one hundred men durings its absence, but it now is nearly nine hundred strong. The men are, generally speaking, in good health, and, although they return home after the expiration of their period of service, yet when mustered out of the service many of them express a determination to return again to the seat of war to do battle in the service of their country. The regiment left last evening by the Fall River route for home, where they will arrive to-day, and receive a welcome by their friends.

A SQUAD OF THE SEVENTH REGIMENT GONE TO JOIN HEADQUARTERS.

When this corps left for the seat of war, some hundreds of the men remained behind. It is satisfactory, however, to state that the last patriotic order of the Colonel, from the headquarters at Baltimore, has had the desired effect, as a squad of the Seventh left yesterday morning, by the Jersey City Railroad, en route for Baltimore.

COMPLAINTS IN REGARD TO THE TRANSPORTATION OF TROOPS.

A non-commissioned officer of the Seventy-first regiment called at this office yesterday afternoon, and complained that he and many others of the regiments belonging to the State militia have made ineffectual application for transportation to their respective camps. They do not desire to purchase express tickets to Harrisburgh, or beyond that to their headquarters, and appear ignorant as to whom they should apply. The matter requires attention.

THE TURF.

Sixth and Last $5,000 Trotting Match between George M. Patchen and Gen. Butler.

This match—which was two-mile heats under saddle—took place yesterday on the Fashion Course. There were present between 2,000 and 3,000 spectators, and the track, although in excellent condition for fast time, was exceedingly dusty, with the further annoyance of a high wind blowing it in clouds as the horses went round the course.

The betting was 100 to 40 on Butler, notwithstanding it was known that WM. WOODRUFF was to mount him instead of MACE, who had got hurt. WOODRUFF labored under the same disadvantage which DOBLE did in the last match, in never having ridden his horse in a match before; but from the excellent opinion every one seems to have of him—both as to capacity and honesty—there was as much confidence among the backers of Butler of his being able to win under WOODRUFF's handling as if DAN MACE had mounted him.

First Heat—Several attempts were made to start, which were foiled by the horses not getting to the score together, Butler breaking up several times and Patchen once. On one attempt, in which Patchen led by about a length at the distance stand, WOODRUFF told DOBLE to pull up or he could not get up to him. At length the start was effected, Butler having the inside place; and the pace was so severe that Butler broke up just after they crossed the score, and Patchen took the inside and led by a couple of lengths into the turn, where he broke up again, and Patchen passed the quarter pole 8 lengths ahead in 35½ seconds, and at least 25 lengths in advance on entering the back stretch before Butler could be got down; this gap was reduced to sixteen lengths at the half mile, in 1:11; and was rather opened again as Patchen passed the distance stand; and just after, and while the horse was in front of the ladies' stand, DAN MACE went out to the middle of the track and loudly called upon young DOBLE to ease up Patchen. The young fellow continued to press Patchen onwards, crossing the score for the second mile in 2:22, and every one felt sure of Butler being distanced, when he had fell off to at least twenty-five lengths on entering the back stretch on the second mile. This was the state of affairs, and with the distance still increasing, as Patchen came round the last turn for the home stretch; when, amidst the greatest excitement, DAN MACE started down the track as fast as he could from where he stood near the distance stand, followed by TOMMY JOHNSON, the pool auctioneer, and a hundred others, and motioned and called out to DOBLE not to distance Butler. JOHNSON went even further, as he ran up to Patchen and called vociferously, and waved his cap at DOBLE to pull up his horse, and not go for the distance—which would, of course, have ended the race—the result was, that DOBLE was evidently bewildered, and brought Patchen almost to a canter just past the distance-stand, but recovering his nerve, gave Patchen his head again, but only in time to just let Butler get in for another heat, whose owner at once offered 100 to 500 that Butler would win the race. The two miles were done in four minutes and fifty-six seconds.

It only wanted a little more yelling on the part of the crowd that ran down the track, and the actual throwing of caps and jackets in Patchen's face, for the scene to have been the daguerreotype of the scenes which occurred at Suffolk Park, Philadelphia, at the match between Flora Temple and Patchen, when Patchen was leading Flora in like manner as they came down the home-stretch.

The occurrence was generally condemned, although the spectators were enabled by it to witness another well-contested heat, at the close of which—when Butler was a length ahead—and it was a gas-light to a farthing rush-light that he would win the heat: the feeling against MACE, who rode Butler in the second heat, found vent in a storm of veils, which so effectually broke Butler up at the distance stand, that he came over the score on the gallop, side and side with Patchen, to whom the judges had no other alternative than to give the heat and race.

Second Heat—Butler led by a length, and took the track at the turn, and increased the space; Patchen lapped him at the quarter pole in 35¾ seconds, and soon after Butler broke up, and Patchen entered on the back-stretch four lengths in front. This was slightly reduced at the half-mile in 1:12¾, from whence Patchen maintained his lead to the distance-stand, where Butler got off his feet again, amidst derisive cheers, and fell off some ten lengths at the score. A splendid burst of speed in going round the first turn of the second mile, placed Butler's nose at Patchen's saddle-girth, and amidst the greatest excitement on the part of the spectators, the positions of the horses were changed before entering the back-stretch, from where Butler led by a clear length, till at the distance-stand, as before related, he hopelessly broke up, and by the previous conduct of his present rider, lost him the race.

Time, 2 miles—5:1.

Thus has come to an unsatisfactory end these splendid series of trotting matches.

The Late Rear-Admiral Foote.

CATSKILL, Saturday, June 27, 1863.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

You state in your sketch of Admiral FOOTE, in to-day's issue, that he was Flag-Lieutenant of the Mediterranean squadron in 1833.

He was Flag-Lieutenant of that squadron in '43, under "Jo SMITH," who also was in that year appointed Commodore, and went "up the straits" in the bran new frigate Cumberland, 44 guns, (afterward razeed to a sloop-of-war, and sunk at Hampton Roads,) to relieve Commodore MORRIS in the Delaware, 74.

Commodore MORRIS' First Luff was SAMUEL BARRON, since a Commodore in the rebel navy, and taken prisoner at Hilton Head.

Commodore BREESE was then Captain of the Cumberland, and among the officers of the frigate were EGBERT THOMPSON, who commanded a gunboat under FOOTE at the taking of Forts Henry and Donelson, and JOHN DOWNES, (son of the old Commodore of that name,) who was in command of one of the iron-clads at the recent bombardment of Charleston. They were both of them then Passed Midshipmen and Master's Mates.

Lieut. FOOTE got up a ship's temperance society on board the frigate, and persuaded many of the men to join it, and others were induced to sign off grog for three months. As some of the men used to say he kept "the gospel halliards pretty taut aboard of her."

But there was nothing going on that the First Luff did not know of—"one eye on deck and the other up aloft." He was a thoroughbred seaman, and remarkable for his zeal and energy in carrying out whatever he undertook to do. When he made up his mind that a thing was right, it had to be done, and nothing was allowed to stand in the way of its execution. I should like to have seen him in command of the iron-clad fleet. There would soon have been bricks and mortar flying about at random in the neighborhood of Fort Sumter. "Leastways," so thinks one who was a shipmate with him in the Cumberland as a

Mount Pleasant Military Academy.

Having been present during the late Examination and Encampment of the Cadets of this venerable institution, it has seemed to me that some account of it would not be uninteresting to your readers.

The examination was thorough and well sustained, and a large number having distinguished themselves in their studies, had honorable mention in the General Order.

The gentlemen in charge of the different departments of instruction are all teachers by profession, and the Principals are enlightened and liberal educators, having a wide and established reputation.

The number of students is about seventy, varying in age from 9 to 18, and the standard of scholarship and discipline is unusually high.

The camp was organized on the play-grounds Thursday, the 18th, and the whole corps subjected to military rules and discipline. Sixteen tents were pitched for their accommodation, and they remained in camp night and day during the week, and conducted themselves like soldiers. The exercises were various, such as examinations in mathematics, Latin, German, French, Greek, rhetoric, &c., &c., and in infantry and artillery drills, fencing, riding, dress parades, &c., &c.

The annual parade and review came off on Thursday, the 25th inst., and I was informed by gentlemen accustomed to be present that it fully sustained the former reputation of the school, and in some respects surpassed it. The corps was reviewed by Gov. DENNISON, of Ohio, who expressed himself as delighted with the order and discipline of the young cadets. The crowd of spectators was very large, and from many different States. We think that it could not have been less than three thousand. Everything was conducted on a liberal scale for the ball in the evening, which was fully attended, and passed off with great brilliancy.

We hesitate not to pronounce this as among the very first institutions in our country in all its appointments for the thorough education of the young, whether considered in an intellectual, physical or moral point of view, one in which its patrons may fully confide, and of which the State may be justly proud.

The Summer vacation continues till the first Thursday in September.

We noticed Gen. ANDERSON on the grounds, and were pleased to find him looking better than when we last met him. A VISITOR.

HIGHLY IMPORTANT.

A HEAVY BATTLE IN PENNSYLVANIA.

The First and Eleventh Corps Engaged with Longstreet and Hill.

Gens. Meade and Reynolds in Command of Our Forces.

No Decisive Result at Last Accounts.

OUR TROOPS BEING REINFORCED.

DEATH OF GEN. REYNOLDS

The Locality of the Battle Near Gettysburgh.

NEAR GETTYSBURGH, Penn., Wednesday, July 1.

A heavy engagement has been going on since 9 o'clock this A. M., between the rebel forces of LONGSTREET and HILL and the First and Eleventh corps, under Gens. REYNOLDS and MEADE.

The locality of the fight is beyond Gettysburgh, on the Chambersburgh Pike.

Portions of the fight have been very severe, and attended with heavy loss.

Thus far the onset of the enemy has been successfully resisted by the two corps mentioned, and the Third and Twelfth are now coming up.

I regret to say that Major-Gen. REYNOLDS was mortally wounded, and has since died.

TELEGRAM FROM PHILADELPHIA.

PHILADELPHIA, Wednesday, July 1.

A Harrisburgh special to the Press says a strong force, under Gen. KNIPE, was marched up the Valley to-day toward Carlisle. A supply train was also sent out which encountered the rebels, and withdrew to Harrisburgh.

Heavy firing has been heard in the direction of Carlisle. No doubt a considerable engagement is going on. The fight is probably near Mechanicsburgh. The danger is not over yet.

TELEGRAMS FROM LANCASTER.

LANCASTER, Penn., Wednesday, July 1.

There is nothing new here. Col. FRANKLIN has communication with our forces at McCall's Ferry and Peach Bottom by a line of couriers. The last message, received at 10 o'clock to-night, says nothing has been seen of the rebel forces in that vicinity.

There is a vague rumor that the rebels are again at York, but it is not reliable.

SPEECH OF GOV. CURTIN IN PHILADELPHIA.

PHILADELPHIA, Wednesday, July 1.

Gov. CURTIN arrived in this city this evening, and addressed a large crowd in front of the Continental. He said if Gen. MEADE's army is successful, the tide of war will turn in our favor; but if it is defeated, we must fall back on our own resources. Military men have concurred in the opinion, and properly, that the defence of Pennsylvania from invasion, and certainly of this city, will be found upon the banks of the Susquehanna, and the call made upon Pennsylvania has been responded to all through the State in a manner much beyond all official anticipation. I ask for 7,800 men from this city. How soon can I get them? [A VOICE—"To-morrow."—cheers.] Do not measure it by days, let it be hours. [Cheers and cries of "Give us McCLELLAN."] Let us not forget as Pennsylvanians, that in this great struggle the rebels strike at Pennsylvania because she is loyal to the National Government. [Cheers.] While there is one sentence of the Constitution remaining and while there is one particle of Government power left, I will stand by it as your Governor, and I may expect you to do the same. [Cheers.] Let us all sustain our Government, and place our trust in the Great God of Nations. The Governor returned thanks to New-York and New-Jersey for their aid. A regiment from the latter State was in front of the hotel at the time.

It is stated that not less than 5,000 men were enrolled in this city to-day, being more than can be mustered in by the few officers engaged for that purpose.

The Union League has raised a brigade, including a fine company of cavalry, called the "Dana Troop," most of whose members have seen active service.

Recruiting for the colored regiments goes on briskly.

LATE NEWS FROM RICHMOND.

AN ATTACK EXPECTED THERE.

PHILADELPHIA, Wednesday, July 1.

The Washington Star has the following.

"The Ella arrived this morning from the Lower Potomac, bringing up the following prisoners: Geo. Burnett, Alfred Headingham and William Fragus, taken by the schooner Races as blockade runners; Charles Douglas and Joseph Parker, taken by the schooner Manjwin, on suspicion of being spies, and William Hunter, who got on the Resolute. The latter says he is a deserter from the Tenth Louisiana Regiment. He represents that the people of Richmond, which place he left last week, were much frightened fearing an attack, and the citizens were being armed."

Thirty rebel cavalry entered Accoturk on Saturday.

The Chattanooga Rebel of the 27th has the following:

RICHMOND, Thursday, June 25.

Ten transports approached the White House this morning and a small force landed. It is reported their pickets have advanced to Tunstall's Station. No apprehensions are felt in official circles.

Train of Cars Wrecked by Guerrillas.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Wednesday, July 1.

This morning's passenger train hence for Frankfort was thrown off the track by the removal of a rail by 40 guerrillas, supposed to be under HINES. The engine was badly damaged. Nobody was hurt.

The rebels burned the baggage car and contents and one passenger car.

The party of guerrillas passed through Shelby County last night, stealing a number of horses on their route.

AFFAIRS IN THE SOUTHWEST.

Progress of the Siege of Vicksburgh.

A VAIN HUNT FOR JOE JOHNSTON.

The Blowing Up of a Rebel Fort

STRUGGLE FOR ITS POSSESSION.

A New Line of Rebel Defence in Alabama.

MEMPHIS, Sunday, June 28.

Official advices from GRANT'S Army to noon on the 25th say everything was working favorably, and the siege was being pushed vigorously.

Three hundred of the Fourth Iowa cavalry on a scout near Bridgeport, Miss., had a fight with five hundred rebel cavalry. Our forces lost about fifty killed, wounded and missing, and one howitzer.

Gen. SHERMAN advanced on the 22d to meet JOHNSTON, but could not find him or any considerable number of his forces.

It is ascertained with certainty that JOHNSTON cannot muster over 35,000 men all told. At last accounts most of these troops were between Canton and Bridgeport.

The rebels are making desperate efforts to interrupt the navigation of the Mississippi below Memphis. They have a battery of six guns at Catfish Point, opposite Greenville. MARMADUKE is also using all his efforts to blockade the river. These matters are receiving the prompt attention of the proper military authorities.

Scouts from Central Mississippi and Alabama report that the feeling in regard to Vicksburgh is very despondent, and reports of the repulse of GRANT's army were frequently circulated to cheer the people up.

Jackson papers say that GRANT lost 10,000 men in his assault on the 20th, and that JOHNSTON was gaining advantages on GRANT's rear.

The rebel Gen. GOHLSON was endeavoring to organize the State militia in Central Mississippi, but with very poor success. The people begin to believe that the Federal forces will soon occupy the entire State.

JEFF. DAVIS has called upon Alabama for 70,000 additional troops to defend the State from invasion; and the Alabama papers are discussing the advantages of Tombigbee River for a line of defensive works.

RODDY, in front of Corinth, has been reinforced by two brigades, and THRALL's artillery from Alabama was sent up to check our raiders.

All is quiet along our lines.

HEADQUARTERS, WALNUT HILLS, NEAR VICKSBURGH, Friday, June 26.

Yesterday afternoon Gen. LOGAN exploded a mine under the rebel fort on his front, blowing one side and one angle away. A struggle then took place for its possession, which has not yet terminated. Our men hold one side, and the enemy the other. We are endeavoring to mount cannon in the breach, which they resist.

Gen. MCPHERSON thinks he will be able to plant a battery in our portion of the fort.

A heavy fire of artillery and musketry was kept up during the night to prevent the rebels from concentrating on that point. Our loss in the affair up to this time may reach 300 killed and wounded. The enemy's loss must have been severe.

RIGHT WING, ARMY OF VICKSBURGH, Thursday, June 25—Eve.

Col. WOOD's pickets captured a messenger this morning, bearing letters from Vicksburgh; also, the following verbal message to JOHNSTON:

"Can hold out ten days; if not sooner relieved, be obliged to surrender."

A letter from Gen. WITHERS to his wife speaks of the probability of going North, and of a speedy exchange.

One from W. L. SMITH speaks despairingly, and another gives a list of fifty-four killed and wounded in an Alabama regiment.

As some of the letters bear marks of being intended for our eyes, they are not implicitly believed, but there is abundant concurrent testimony to sustain the story of general disasters.

CAIRO, Wednesday, July 1.

The steamer Belle, of Memphis, brings Vicksburgh dates of the 26th ult.

The recent battle in GRANT's rear is said to have been severe; but no particulars have been received.

There is no doubt that the rebels have been making preparations to cross the river, and escape into Louisiana, as quite a number of skiffs and flatboats have been discovered.

The Twentieth, Thirtieth, and Forty-fifth Illinois regiments are among those who rushed into the breach made in the foot of the hill by the explosion of the mine in Gen. LOGAN's front on the 25th.

This fort is on the highest ground in the vicinity, and completely commands most of the rebel works. Our troops are mounting 32-pounder Parrots and 9-inch Dahlgrens in it.

REBEL REPORTS FROM VICKSBURGH.

JACKSON, Friday, June 26.

A staff officer, who left Vicksburgh on Monday, reports the garrison closely besieged. The enemy keep up a constant fire, much severer than formerly, as they have the range of the town.

An entire block of buildings was destroyed on Washington-street by incendiaries. Every means has been taken to discover them but without success. The sappers and miners on both sides are hard at work, and so close together that they can hear the sound of each others picks.

LATEST FROM GEN. ROSECRANS.

A Battle Expected at Tullahoma.

The Rebel Communications with Chattanooga Severed.

COLCORD CHURCH, (Five miles from Tullahoma.) Tuesday, June 30.

The situation here is not materially changed. A reconnoissance to-day was made within three miles and a half of the rebel stronghold.

The rain has continued for the last forty-eight hours and has been unusually heavy. The roads are in a terrible condition. Movements are almost prohibited thereby. But with his unparalleled perperseverance and persistence Gen. ROSECRANS has pushed on.

Col. WILDER's expedition returned to-day. He burned the bridge at Decherd and destroyed a large part of the railroad track. He found only a small garrison at Decherd, whom he whipped and drove out; but immediately after he burned the bridge a large force of the enemy came in. Decherd is only twelve miles in the rear of Tullahoma.

The whistling of locomotives at Tullahoma was distinctly heard yesterday. This is the only foundation for the rumor that the rebels are retreating to Chattanooga.

Little doubt is entertained but that the enemy will fight us in the forts here, but their silence is very strange. The country is very difficult to operate in, being low, level, marshy, and overgrown with underbrush.

STEADMAN's brigade made a reconnoissance to-day to within three miles and a half of Tullahoma. Two regiments of the enemy were encountered. An engagement ensued, in which the enemy gave way without serious resistance or much reluctance. The skirmishers of the Tenth Indiana and Fourth Kentucky regiments were principally engaged.

The following casualties are reported: Lieut. Jenkins, Second cavalry, killed; Orderly Sergeant Newhouse, Private Sedden, Company I; Corp. Bies, Privates Dinsmore, Pennington, Boyle, Kellog, Clark, Javerty, and Corp. Doweity, Company I, Tenth Indiana, slightly: Private Sarberout, seriously, and Privates Bennet, Sennest, Glibert and Virgil, Company I, Fourth Kentucky, slightly.

The Chattanooga Rebel of the 27th and 28th June is received. It says:

"One hundred wounded of STUART's Division have arrived from the field of Beech Grove."

It also says:

Two divisions are engaged at Liberty and Hoover Gaps; meantime reinforcements are being hurried forward. Five brigades passed up yesterday, and JOHN R. JACKSON has been dispatched to hold himself in readiness.

Among the killed at Beech Grove, the Rebel mentions Adjutant THOMAS, Twentieth Tennessee. The rebel loss was 100 killed and 400 or 500 wounded.

The Rebel of the 28th ult., on the situation, says:

"There is no question but that the enemy is approaching, and a great battle is to be fought. Every preparation is being made to give him a warm reception. Baggage and sick are being sent to the rear and reinforcements to the front.

Another brigade from Western Virginia passed up yesterday, chiefly Virginia troops in their first campaign. The Tennessee portion of BUCKNER's command passed up last evening, and JACKSON's will probably follow in the morning. We learn that BRECKINRIDGE's division did not reach Montgomery, having been recalled by Gen. JOHNSTON to Jackson.

We overestimated the loss in killed and wounded. The whole number will not exceed 200, not 75 of whom were killed.

It was reported last evening that 3,000 or 4,000 of the enemy's cavalry had occupied Manchester, and that they had burned one or two residences this side of Hoover's Gap. This story is not believed here."

COLCORD CHURCH, Tuesday, June 30—8 P. M.

A reconnoisance by Gen. STEADMAN, this afternoon, was pushed within two miles of Tullahoma. Gen. THOMAS accompanied the column, and reports the enemy in force in their works, with vedettes thrown out a short distance from their front.

It is thought by some that a mere shell of the rebel army remains in Tennessee, which is, doubtless, a mistake. We found four brigades at Hoover's Gap, four at Liberty Gap, and our friends at Shelbyville report 18,000 men of POLK's corps as passing through that place.

CHEATHAM's division is reported as having moved to Elk River Bridge.

Dechard bridge, which was destroyed, can hardly be rebuilt before six days, when all will be decided. While the loss of this bridge will not prevent reinforcements coming, the rebels cannot carry off their stores or heavy munitions of war.

THE TURF.

Sixth and Last $5,000 Trotting Match between George M. Patchen and Gen. Butler.

This match—which was two-mile heats under saddle—took place yesterday on the Fashion Course. There were present between 2,000 and 3,000 spectators, and the track, although in excellent condition for fast time, was exceedingly dusty, with the further annoyance of a high wind blowing it in clouds as the horses went round the course.

The betting was 100 to 40 on Butler, notwithstanding it was known that WM. WOODRUFF was to mount him instead of MACE, who had got hurt. WOODRUFF labored under the same disadvantage which DOBLE did in the last match, in never having ridden his horse in a match before; but from the excellent opinion every one seems to have of him—both as to capacity and honesty—there was as much confidence among the backers of Butler of his being able to win under WOODRUFF's handling as if DAN MACE had mounted him.

First Heat—Several attempts were made to start, which were foiled by the horses not getting to the score together, Butler breaking up several times and Patchen once. On one attempt, in which Patchen led by about a length at the distance stand, WOODRUFF told DOBLE to pull up or he could not get up to him. At length the start was effected. Butler having the inside place; and the pace was so severe that Butler broke up just after they crossed the score, and Patchen took the inside and led by a couple of lengths into the turn, where he broke up again, and Patchen passed the quarter pole 8 lengths ahead in 35½ seconds, and at least 25 lengths in advance on entering the back stretch before Butler could be got down; this gap was reduced to sixteen lengths at the half mile, in 1:11; and was rather opened again as Patchen passed the distance stand; and just after, and while the horse was in front of the ladies' stand, DAN MACE went out to the middle of the track and loudly called upon young DOBLE to ease up Patchen. The young fellow continued to press Patchen onwards, crossing the score for the second mile in 2:22, and every one felt sure of Butler being distanced, when he had fell off to at least twenty-five lengths on entering the back stretch on the second mile. This was the state of affairs, and with the distance still increasing, as Patchen came round the last turn for the home stretch; when, amidst the greatest excitement, DAN MACE started down the track as fast as he could from where he stood near the distance stand, followed by TOMMY JOHNSON, the pool auctioneer, and a hundred others, and motioned and called out to DOBLE not to distance Butler. JOHNSON went even further, as he ran up to Patchen and called vociferously, and waved his cap at DOBLE to pull up his horse, and not go for the distance—which would, of course, have ended the race—the result was, that DOBLE was evidently bewildered, and brought Patchen almost to a canter just past the distance-stand, but recovering his nerve, gave Patchen his head again, but only in time to just let Butler get in for another heat, whose owner at once offered 100 to 500 that Butler would win the race. The two miles were done in four minutes and fifty-six seconds.

It only wanted a little more yelling on the part of the crowd that ran down the track, and the actual throwing of caps and hats in Patchen's face, for the scene to have been the duplicate of the scenes which occurred at Suffolk Park, Philadelphia, at the match between Flora Temple and Patchen, when Patchen was leading Flora in like manner as they came down the home-stretch.

The occurrence was generally condemned, although the spectators were enabled by it to witness another well-contested heat, at the close of which—when Butler was a length ahead—and it was a gas-light to a farthing rush-light that he would win the heat: the feeling against MACE, who rode Butler in the second heat, found vent in a storm of veils, which so effectually broke Butler up at the distance stand, that he came under the score on the gallop, side and side with Patchen, to whom the judges had no other alternative than to give the heat and race.

Second Heat—Butler led by a length, and took the track at the turn, and increased the space; Patchen lapped him at the quarter pole in 35½ seconds, and soon after Butler broke up, and Patchen entered on the back-stretch four lengths in front. This was slightly reduced at the half-mile in 1:12½, from whence Patchen maintained his lead to the distance-stand, where Butler got off his feet again, amidst derisive cheers, and fell off some ten lengths at the score. A splendid burst of speed in going round the first turn of the second mile, placed Butler's nose at Patchen's saddle-girth, and amidst the greatest excitement on the part of the spectators, the positions of the horses were changed before entering the back-stretch, from where Butler led by a clear length, till at the distance-stand, as before related, he hopelessly broke up, and by the previous conduct of his present rider, lost him the race.

Time, 2 miles—5:1.

Thus has come to an unsatisfactory end these splendid series of trotting matches.

Evacuation of the City of Mexico by the Mexicans.

The Church Party Offer their Allegiance to the Emperor Napoleon.

The Whole French Army to Occupy the Capital.

Newspapers Established Favoring the French Policy.

The Democratic Element and Popular Sovereignty to be Extirpated.

Confiscation of Property by Gen. Forey.

SAN FRANCISCO, Tuesday, June 30.

Dates from the City of Mexico from the 30th of May to the 6th of June are received. The news is of the highest importance.

President JUAREZ and his Cabinet had concluded to evacuate the City of Mexico, believing that the most effectual resistance to the French army could be made outside of the walls.

On the 21st of May the Government moved to San Luis de Potosi, taking all the movable firearms and munitions of war along.

They also took with them two millions of dollars from the Treasury.

The force that garrisoned the City of Mexico, said to number over 20,000 men, was swithdrawn to the Cuernevoca Plaza, and to intermediate points around the city, for the purpose of carrying on guerrilla warfare.

On June 1, a meeting was held in the city, at which the principal leaders of the Church party were present. They sent a commission to Gen. FOREY to offer their allegiance to the Emperor LOUIS NAPOLEON.

On June 5, the French division, under Gen. BAZAINE, occupied the main entrance to the city, and afforded the Church party protection against the excited populace.

The whole French army was expected to occupy the Capital on the 8th of June.

Three newspapers had been established favoring the policy of the French.

One of these papers states that the occupation of the City of Mexico settles with absolute certainty, that it is necessary to extirpate by root the democratic element, and no longer need there be even a dream of popular sovereignty.

Gen. FOREY had issued a decree confiscating the property of all parties who have been or are in arms against the French.

This news is derived from letters received here from high Mexican officials.

The Late Rear-Admiral Foote.

CATSKILL, Saturday, June 27, 1863.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

You state in your sketch of Admiral FOOTE, in to-day's issue, that he was Flag-Lieutenant of the Mediterranean squadron in 1833.

He was Flag-Lieutenant of that squadron in '43, under "Jo SMITH," who also was in that year appointed Commodore, and went "up the straits" in the bran new frigate Cumberland, 44 guns, (afterward razeed to a sloop-of-war, and sunk at Hampton Roads,) to relieve Commodore MORRIS in the Delaware, 74.

Commodore MORRIS' First Luff was SAMUEL BARRON, since a Commodore in the rebel navy, and taken prisoner at Hilton Head.

Commodore BREESE was then Captain of the Cumberland, and among the officers of the frigate were ROBERT THOMPSON, who commanded a gunboat under FOOTE at the taking of Forts Henry and Donelson, and JOHN DOWNES, (son of the old Commodore of that name,) who was in command of one of the iron-clads at the recent bombardment of Charleston. They were both of them then Passed Midshipmen and Master's Mates.

Lieut. FOOTE got up a ship's temperance society on board the frigate, and persuaded many of the men to join it, and others were induced to sign off grog for three months. As some of the men used to say he kept "the gospel halliards pretty taut aboard of her."

But there was nothing going on that the First Luff did not know of—"one eye on deck and the other up aloft." He was a thoroughbred seaman, and remarkable for his zeal and energy in carrying out whatever he undertook to do. When he made up his mind that a thing was right, it had to be done, and nothing was allowed to stand in the way of its execution. I should like to have seen him in command of the iron-clad fleet. There would soon have been bricks and mortar flying about at random in the neighborhood of Fort Sumter. "Leastways," so thinks one who was a shipmate with him in the Cumberland as a

Mount Pleasant Military Academy.

Having been present during the late Examination and Encampment of the Cadets of this venerable institution, it has seemed to me that some account of it would not be uninteresting to your readers.

The examination was thorough and well sustained, and a large number having distinguished themselves in their studies, had honorable mention in the General Order.

The gentlemen in charge of the different departments of instruction are all teachers by profession, and the Principals are enlightened and liberal educators, having a wide and established reputation.

The number of students is about seventy, varying in age from 9 to 18, and the standard of scholarship and discipline is unusually high.

The camp was organized on the play-grounds Thursday, the 18th, and the whole corps subjected to military rules and discipline. Sixteen tents were pitched for their accommodation, and they remained in camp night and day during the week, and conducted themselves like soldiers. The exercises were various, such as examinations in mathematics, Latin, German, French, Greek, rhetoric, &c., &c., and in infantry and artillery drills, fencing, riding, dress parades, &c., &c.

The annual parade and review came off on Thursday, the 25th inst., and I was informed by gentlemen accustomed to be present that it fully sustained the former reputation of the school, and in some respects surpassed it. The corps was reviewed by Gov. DENNISON, of Ohio, who expressed himself as delighted with the order and discipline of the young cadets. The crowd of spectators was very large, and from many different States. We think that it could not have been less than three thousand. Everything was conducted on a liberal scale for the ball in the evening, which was fully attended, and passed off with great brilliancy.

We hesitate not to pronounce this as among the very first institutions in our country in all its appointments for the thorough education of the young, whether considered in an intellectual, physical or moral point of view, one in which its patrons may fully confide, and of which the State may be justly proud.

The Summer vacation continues till the first Thursday in September.

We noticed Gen. ANDERSON on the grounds, and were pleased to find him looking better than when we last met him.
